Here's to a Song in the Rain

Man wants but little here out west,
But he wants that little long;
A good long slicker, a rubber vest,
A rainproof helmet that slopes south-west,
Some right tight shingles above his nest,
And down in his heart a song.

A song to the chill from the Cascade's top,
And the warm, wet kiss from the sea;
The trailing clouds with their skirts a-sop,
Heaven's dew-dripped curtains that drip and drop,
The valley fogs with their silver sloop
And the drip of the damp fir tree:

Then here's to the back of the canvas duck
And the tree toad's moist refrain;
And here's to the man that keeps his pluck,
Though wet to the waist and stalled in the muck;
Who never gets soggy or down on his luck,
The soul that can sing in the rain.
—Anon.

If Crater Lake really looks like the picture of it in the Manhattan cafe at Medford, Jack London cannot be blamed in the least for raving about it.

Limber Limericks

Said a cheerful old man of Asbestos:
"There's no use for you town folks to jest us;
If at home we must keep
Because mud's three feet deep—
Still, the game warden cannot molest us."

A miner 'way up on Sardine
Drank a gallon or so kerosene;
His friends thought he'd die,
So they started to cry,
But he fooled 'em—now, wasn't that mean?

A handsome young rancher named Riegel,
Whose address don't chance to be Beagle,
Chased a skunk to its hole,
Poked it out with a pole—
Now his presence is almost illegal.

High up on old Mount Roxy Ann
Lives a very peculiar man;
He don't let up his labors
To talk of his neighbors—
And he lies just the least that he can.

A colonel who lives in Sams valley
When quite young had a sweetheart named Sally,
But the truth not to smother,
She wedded another—
Thirteen, with twins twice, is her tally.

A foxy old cuss at Butte Falls,
Who is up to all sorts of cute stalls,
Has invented a way
To make whisky from hay—
But he wants more for the recipe than any one is willing to pay, so there is no danger of a fodder famine in the Rogue river valley this winter.

The ancient adage, "Man proposes and God disposes," is subject to the usual leap-year alterations.

"Made in Medford"

Medford's chief claim to literary distinction is undoubtedly the Crater Lake Magazine, in a recent issue of which—"with apologies to Whittier"—appears the following flashing gem of poetry:

Phoenix is a rural place,
Eagle Point is berried;
Gold Hill flaunts her golden lace,
And Central Point is flurried,
Ashland is a beauty town,
And Talent is a garden;
Medford wears a trader's gown,
And Jacksonville's the warden.

Why confine the apologies to Whittier?

LEGALLY HONEST.

WHEN a man has accumulated a sum of money within the law—that is to say in a legally honest way—the people no longer have any right to share in the earnings resulting from that accumulation. The man has respected the law in accumulating the money. Ex post facto laws should not apply to property in whatever form that cannot be denied him in any process short of confiscation."

The above, quoted from a recent interview of John D. Rockefeller, was intended, so it is alleged, as an argument against the income tax. We can't tell what the last sentence means, but the rest of it, if it is an argument against anything, is an argument against any form of taxation whatever. But isn't it amusing to hear this pious old man talk of legal honesty and accumulating money within the law? Something seems to suggest to him that the people think they have an excuse for attempting to recover some of their contributions to the Standard Oil Company. If they do attempt it, we dare say it will be in a "legally honest way."

BACK TO NATURE?

SEVERAL fads and -isms have for their basic principle the "back to Nature" idea. It would indeed be interesting to be the only person in the world to remain as our present civilization has made us, and watch the antics of the rest, who had gone "back to Nature." In a book called "Sons of the Morning"—don't know who wrote it, and it doesn't matter—the following indictment of Nature occurs:

"I'm weary of this nonsense about going straight to Nature. She's a bat, a mole; she doesn't know her best friends. She'll sink a saint in midocean—a real saint with an 18-carat halo—and let a pirate come safely and happily to some innocent merchantman stuffed with the treasures of honest men or her own priceless grains and seeds. She'll put back the hand of progress at the smallest opportunity; she'll revert to the primitive if you turn your back on her for an instant; she conjures our peaches into wild plums; our apples into crabs; man into—God knows what—something a good deal lower than the angels, or even the cave dwellers. If we let her, she would hunt for and polish up the missing link again and huddle the world backwards faster than we spin round the sun. We fool ourselves that we are her favorites. Not so. She is only our stepmother, and behaves accordingly. She knew that the advent of conscious intelligence must be a death blow to her; and she has never forgiven man for exhibiting it."

Much more might be said to the same effect, but the author of "Sons of the Morning," aside from omitting to mention the clay-eaters of North Carolina and Elbert Hubbard as horrible examples, has covered the subject pretty thoroughly.

YOUNG MOTHER DIES IN GIVING BIRTH TO TWINS

Mrs. J. J. Ritter died at her home in Gold Hill at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon, after having given birth to twin girls. One of the babies is not expected to survive, but hope is entertained for the other. The birth was brought on somewhat prematurely by the ill health of the mother. Mrs. Ritter, who was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Cook, was but 21 years of age. A two-year-old boy is left motherless. The date of the funeral has not been fixed.

Any little wound or abrasion of the flesh occurring in cold weather that is not promptly treated becomes a bad sore and is difficult to heal. Apply BALLARD'S SNOW LINIMENT at once when such accidents happen. The wound heals promptly and soon does away with the annoyance of a bandage. Price 25c, 50c and $1.00 per bottle. Sold by Jarvis, the druggist.
