THE POISON PARAGRAPHER AGAIN

SOME JOURNALISTIC JOSHERS, with the sensibilities and delicate good taste common to the African rhino, must have their funny fling at Bryan's resignation from the cabinet. Desiring nothing more devoutly than the embarrassment of the administration in these critical times, they profess a sympathy—shallow and insincere in truth—for the President in what they are pleased to term the "embarrassment" afforded by the "renegade" Bryan.

These fellows are the jackals of letters, always on the quiver for some crocodilian feast. To them the high motives, which prompted the Secretary of State's voluntary relinquishment of the portfolio rather than yield a sincere belief, or cause strife in the official family, are riddles unreadable. The equally sincere and friendly attitude of the President, in the acceptance of Bryan's resignation, is beyond their soundings.

Already they are playing the press to array Wilson against Bryan—to encourage enmity and split the party—and, fond hope, even to contrive the appearance of Bryan as leader of the Democratic insurgency. Just why a satisfied party should incur a bothersome quiz—they must breed strife to answer it.

In this wise it is schemed to deliver the nation again—to the slaving maw of big business and the campaign contributors of Wall Street.

So firmly are the roots of our national friendship and esteem enlaced in the careers and characters of both Wilson and Bryan, that

It can't be done.

When you are starting to work in the morning, be sure that you haven't forgotten something. Rummage yourself a bit and remember to be courteous, kind and conscientious. Then fly at your job. If circumstances arise to which this treatment will not apply, weigh your words carefully and shoot them straight. Be fearless. People will get next to you—they will like, admire and respect you. Do you measure up to this standard? Few of us do. But YOU can!

The Rogue River valley does not need irrigation because it rains. Therefore it does not need a lumber mill because most of the stoves burn coal; it does not need new railways, because the Southern Pacific has been on the job for forty years; it does not need a beet sugar factory because sugar can be shipped in.—From the Smudging Pot, in Medford Sun.

An official statement from the Austrian war office admitted that Italian troops crossed the Isopzo, five miles northwest of Goritz, after a three-day battle.

In the north the Germans are making a new move in the direction of Warsaw and have gained a success of some proportions on the Rawka. Heavy fighting continues in the entire Baltic littoral.

Bryan Appeals to German-Americans. Washington. — William Jennings Bryan issued an appeal addressed to "the German-Americans" urging them to aid in maintaining peace between the United States and the fatherland by exerting their influence with the German government to persuade it not to take any steps that would lead in the direction of war.

The Bedtime Sheep

I

Back to the starlit land of sleep, homeward hasten the pattering sheep; I count them all as they pass the gate—one of the rascals is always late! (The rose at the window taps the glass, by a broomstick stirred as the witch rides past.) Always I play at sheep in bed, till the sandman comes with his dreams instead; always my flock romp home at dark from their pasture land in the prince's park.

II

All are fuzzy and some are brown, but most are white as the thistle-down; all of them answer to my call—all save one—when the shadows fall. (The tree toad shrills from his leaf again—he knows, I guess, it's going to rain.) Somewhere out on the road he stoops to browse a weed where the mullen droops—just as I'm tired, he joins the rest; and, daddy, I love the black sheep best.

III

Little Boy Blue of Slumberland, dreams and the dreamer walk hand in hand; the pastured sheep of the prince's park really come through the magic dark. (The curtain stirs to the soft night wind—fays and pixies are always kind.) Where clover faces lift them up to bid the straggler stay and sup, romping home, when the dew is down, by the white road that leads to town, comes your flock—good night—and rest. . . . I'm glad that you love the black sheep best.
