A man in Chicago was given life imprisonment for stealing turkeys while many murders and gangsters still range free upon the city streets. Either Chicago is getting to be a more law abiding place or else a thief who steals turkeys must be considered too much of a piker to be permitted to run at large.

A fasting faddist at Denver is near death because he sought relief of bodily ills thru fasting. It may be that he will yet achieve the cure.

Elinor Smith, an eighteen year old girl pilot attained the height of 32,000 feet in an airplane this week and there by set a new world's record for women. She is said to have fainted when at that height. She is not the only young lady who has lost her reason trying to fly high.

The work of taking the census of this great nation has started and before many months we will be able to know how much the various sections of our country have grown or diminished in population. There will be many new statistics compiled and a reapportionment of representatives to our national congress.

Enumerators are now checking upon the business places, the factories, mines and mills. Then will follow the farm census and the enumeration of the population.

It seems as though there is little excitement engendered in the rural districts over the coming primary. All the smoke seems to be centering around the up-state cities. It won't be long, however until it will be spread to the outlying precincts and the platforms which the candidates will run upon and soon forget will be broadcast over the entire state.

Business in southern Oregon is gradually getting better. At least we are led to believe so from the general trend of conversation in the several cities which make up the business centers of this portion of the state. As a natural sequence there was a dull period following the Wall Street crash, which, we are told by national writers of eminence was for the most part psychological rather than real.

The mills, factories and mines are opening and those which were running have increased their output and subsequently their pay rolls. This together with the activities on the farms and orchards have reacted in the channels of trade and the merchants are beginning to notice an increase in sales. It is only a matter of time until we will all have forgotten that there ever was a slump in 1929 although business will probably never be good enough to satisfy those who are in business.

tell you that he can win more with home manufactured dice than any other kind.

One forward looker says that woman will never be really free until she can loaf like a man. In order to do this she will have to learn how to spend most of her time "in conference."

A newspaper editor received a poem entitled, "Why am I alive?"

He replied: "You are alive because you put your poem through the mail instead of bringing it."—Ulk Berlin.

The Boston social worker who says nagging wives and poor cooks wreck more homes than vampires and sirens do, may be right, but given a choice, most men would rather have the sirens do the wrecking.—Youngstown Telegram.

Those thieves who broke into a store and escaped with $1,200 worth of lingerie probably hauled the loot away in their vest pockets.—Dayton (Ohio) News.

A woman has a fat husband and instead of throwing things around and messing up the place in general when she gets mad at him, she just throws his shoes under the bed.

Maybe hard work never harmed any one, but we've never noticed any marvelous benefits from carrying out a couple of tubs full of ashes.—Fort Wayne News-Sentinel.

When a jury reported in court in Pittsburg, the other day, the foreman who was a woman, reached in her purse for the verdict and then had to tell the judge she had misplaced it. Doesn't that sound home-like?

A generation ago the popular slogan was "Four years more of the full dinner pail." Now it is "a sedan, a coupe and a rumble seat roadster for every American family."

A German scientist is said to be working on an airplane which will travel 2,000 miles an hour. Why the hurry?

Some people seem to think that the rules of war will be observed in war just as the rules of bridge are observed in a bridge game. But they fail to remember that the prize at stake in war is much more vital than a hand-embroidered guest towel.

We expect to learn from the radio some of these days that if you teach your babies to smoke when they are eight months old they will never have diseased tonsils or double chins.

Modern science hasn't improved everything. For instance the matrimonial matches they made in the old days lasted a lot longer than the ones they make nowadays.

We are beginning to hear the cry from London that it is up to Uncle Sam again to "save the world" and somehow or other that slogan has a familiar sound.

The pre-war stuff which the boot leggers sell is rightly named. A couple of drinks and then the war starts.

Senator Smoot, in advocating more protection on dice declared that Americans could do better with their own dice. All of which is of course true. Ann crap-shooter will

There's A Reason

"More power to the home" is something more than a catch phrase. A wife at the table is worth two in the kitchen. The elimination of drudgery has done more to raise the standard of living in America than the industrial prosperity, high wages or any of the other factors economists talk about.

There has been something more than an altruism back of all this development of household appliances designed to put house-keeping on the same plane of efficiency as the average office.

Increased utilization of electricity—that is, increased consumption—has meant decreased cost to the consumer. The industrialist calls it "mass production"—mass production of electricity means lower rates.

The electrical industry has spent large sums in research and in producing devices to increase consumption and improve standards of living.

That's why you are continually urged to use this or that electrical appliance in your home.
