Would You Like to Drive to the Edge of Crater Lake?

With the same spirit of looking ahead that inspired him to urge the federal government to include Crater Lake in its national park system, William G. Steel, known as the Father of Crater Lake now suggests a road down to the lake inside the 1,000-foot cliffs of the ancient volcano.

Mr. Steel says, and the thousands of visitors agree with him, that now only one out of a hundred people who make the trip to the park attempt the tedious foot-path trip to the lake. And many times we have heard the remark that persons have been sorry they did go, for it was almost too much for their strength. For this reason the full beauty of the lake is lost to the visitors.

The main objection to a road inside the rim is that it would mar the natural beauty of the lake. However, the portion of the rim which would be used for the proposed road—from Garfield peak to the base of Kerr Notch, thence through a tunnel to the rim, can be seen from very few places around the lake, because of the height and steep incline of the cliffs. The shelf road which would be carved out would be four miles long instead of 13, the length of the present outer rim road between these points, and would be built on a four per cent maximum grade instead of ten per cent.

Then, with thought to prevent unnecessary cutting into the rim, Steel makes his suggestion of the tunnel through the very walls of the volcano. Spectacular, certainly. But also, a road that would undoubtedly be built sooner or later—why not now?

Mr. Steel further suggests that the debris from the tunnel be used to build parking spaces and boat landings. In this connection we would urge that careful supervision of such building should be made to prevent unnecessary "cluttering" of the lake shore. But the public should—and they will sooner or later—have easy access to the lake, itself, and we support Mr. Steel wholeheartedly in his proposal, and recommend that the Educational Advisory Board of the Department of the Interior investigate the proposal thoroughly before they carry out any construction that would hinder such a development.

The appropriation for a road around the lake has been made. Another one for an inner-rim road would be necessary later if part of this road now under construction did not make possible a descent to the water by car.

Why waste funds, or duplicate expenditures. Build NOW for the future!

Now that the primaries are over many of the candidates are wondering why they did not have more friends.

ADVICE ON TAXATION Given by H. A. Goetsch of Wadena, Minnesota

Tax the people, tax with care,
 To help the multimillionaire.

Tax the farmer, tax his fowl.
 Tax the dog, and tax his howl.
 Tax the hen and tax her egg
 And let the bloomin' mudsill beg.
 Tax the pig and tax his squeal.
 Tax his boots, run down at heel;
 Tax his horses, tax his hands,
 Tax his plow and tax his clothes,
 Tax the rag that wipes his nose;
 Tax his house and tax his bed,
 Tax the bald spot on his head.
 Tax the ox, and tax the ass,
 Tax his "Henry," tax the gas;
 Tax the road that he must pass,
 And make him travel o'er the grass.
 Tax his cow, and tax his calf.
 Tax him if he dares to laugh;
 He is just a common man,
 So tax the cuss just all you can.

Tax the laborer—be discreet—
 Tax him walking on the street.
 Tax his bread and tax his meat;
 Tax the shoes clear off his feet.
 Tax his hard-earned paper kale;
 Tax the payroll, tax the sale,
 Tax his pipe and tax his smoke—
 Teach him government is no joke—
 Tax their coffins—tax their shrouds
 Tax their souls beyond the clouds.

Tax the farmer, tax his flocks;
 Tax the servants, tax their socks.
 Tax the living, tax the dead;
 Tax the unborn, ere they're fed.
 Tax the water, tax the air—
 Tax the sunlight if you dare.

Tax them all, and tax them well.
 Tax them to the gates of hell!
 —But close your eyes so you can't see

Find Remains of Dead Indian Pair in Forest Ravine

The bodies of Edwin C. Brown, 54, and his wife, 56, Dead Indian district homesteaders, who perished in a blizzard that swept over that district last January, were found Saturday morning about 10 o'clock, by William Taylor and William Lindsay, in a ravine, about three miles from the Walter Hash home. The couple lay close together, as for protection, and apparently died in each other's arms, as the storm howled about them.

The bodies were taken to the Hash ranch and then taken to Ashland by Deputy Coroner Stock of Ashland.

The location of the bodies indicated the pair were aimlessly wandering when death overtook them on the mountainside.

A systematic search of the area was made a week ago Sunday and another had been planned for Sunday.

The Browns on January 11, last, left the home of a neighbor to travel to their own cabin two miles away. That was the last time they were seen alive. Burnt matches, magazine leaves and letters known to have been in the possession of Mrs. Brown, and found afterwards, indicated the couple at one time had been within a short distance of their own cabin, but were blinded by the snow.
