Forest Fireburg Is Foiled
When Device Is Located

The first forest fire of the season in Jackson county was prevented Sunday when the state police by chance discovered an ingenious contraption planted near a trail in the heavily wooded timber southwest of Ashland, near the Silver Creek mine. The device consisted of a cheap microscope attached to a piece of fence wire and stuck in the ground, with dry leaves and bits of brush piled around it. The microscope was so arranged that it would catch the rays of the sun and ignite the leaves and the fire spread to the dry grass. A cloudy sky was all that prevented the plan of the firebug from working.

A miner of the Silver Creek district first discovered the device while coming down the trail, being attracted by a stray glint of sunshine on the microscope. He reported the matter to the authorities.

Members of the state police and forest service said it was the first time they had ever found a microscope fire-sarter, though they long suspected their use in forest incendiarism.

It is thought that the trap was set in the evening, giving the arsonist plenty of time to cover his tracks, and blame the blaze on a carelessly thrown cigarette.

Crater Lake Campground
Now a Popular Place

Attesting the popularity of auto campgrounds in the park, scores of campfires are blazing nightly while visitors are preparing evening meals and later while away pleasant hours around the ruddy glow. Conditions are ideal for the use of the rim campground, the largest of several maintained in the park.

There under lofty hemlocks, softly sighing in evening breezes, visitors can establish camps in the proximity of free wood, shower baths and in the vicinity of a caretaker, whose pride and joy are centered in his efforts to make all visitors comfortable and contented. Campers are not located far from the Community House, where the educational division presents lectures, moving pictures and programs of general entertainment, including singing and dancing.

During the course of the day, campers can take advantage of guided field trips leading to points of interest by road, trail and water. All day boat trips three times weekly include explorations of Wizard Island and long boat excursions over the lake's blue depths. Short island explorations and boat lake excursions are afternoon features daily. A walking trip to the summit of Garfield peak is a daily feature, as well as hourly lectures in the Sinnott Memorial on Victor Rock in the inner rim.

As soon as the rim road is open for travel, rim caravans, making a 35 mile circuit of the lake, will be daily features. Sunset drives to "The Watchman," first high point on the northwest rim are also to begin when road conditions permit.

Strange Signs Appear in Rebuilt Chinese City

Now that Chapei and other sections of Shanghai which were ruined during the Sino-Japanese conflict in February are being at least partly rebuilt, some very startling shop signs and advertisements are making their appearance. The intent of the advertiser is usually evident, but his uses of English in his signs are highly peculiar.

"Underwears and pants pressed to satisfaction. Ladies a specialty," announces one new sign.

Nearby a rebuilt laundry flaunts a white and red banner 20 feet long which reads: "First-class laundry; make wash foreign ladies."

An upholsterer attempts to draw the trade of automobile owners by announcing: "Motor Car Tailor; Very Fine."

Prospective clients of a new barber shop may be repelled by a long line of gilt letters on a window. The sign says: "First Class Barber; Cut Heads Fine."

A fur shop advertises, somewhat ambiguously: "First-class furrier. We make fur fine coat out of your skin or out of ours."

Another novelty is a sign which reads: "Shirts no fit no like no pay. We very nice."
