ROOSEVELT SPEAKS ON RECOVERY ACT

about it and there is nothing particularly new in the principle. It goes back to the basic idea of society and of the nation itself that the people acting in a group can accomplish things which no individual acting alone could even hope to bring about.

"Here is an example. In the cotton textile code and in other agreements already signed, child labor has been abolished. That makes me personally happier than any other one thing with which I have been connected since I came to Washington.

Child Labor Eliminated.
"In the textile industry—an industry which came to me spontaneously and with a splendid co-operation as soon as the recovery act was signed—child labor was an old evil. But no employer acting alone was able to wipe it out. If one employer tried it, or if one state tried it, the costs of operation rose so high that it was impossible to compete with the employers or states which had failed to act.

"The moment the recovery act was passed, this monstrous thing which neither opinion nor law could reach through years of effort went out in a flash.

"As a British editorial put it, we did more under a code in one day than they in England had been able to do under the common law in 85 years of effort.

"I use this incident, my friends, not to boast of what has already been done, but to point the way to you for even greater co-operative efforts this summer and autumn.

"We are not going through another winter like the last. I doubt if ever any people so bravely and cheerfully endured a season half so bitter. We cannot ask Americans to continue to face such needless hardships. It is time for courageous action, and the recovery bill gives us the means to conquer unemployment with exactly the same weapon that we have used to strike down child labor."

Fehl Trial Begun Tues.

State Claims Fehl Tampered with Ballot Boxes Before February Theft

Alleging that County Judge Earl H. Fehl and Tom L. Brecheen got into the county clerk's office, shortly after the general election last November and tore off stickers on ballot pouches in order that they might claim the votes had been tampered with, and thus prevent a recount, the state opened its case against Fehl in Klamath county courts Tuesday, confident that it will prove that Fehl was the brains behind the subsequent ballot theft in February.

The state will seek to prove that Fehl, from the very first did not want a recount of the votes, not only because he did not wish Schermerhorn to be ousted as sheriff, but because he feared a change might result in other offices as well.

Prosecuting Attorney Moody, in his opening address to the jury stated in part as follows:

"The evidence will show that to cover up the sticker removal act, Fehl called the attention of members of the grand jury, particularly the foreman, to the missing stickers, and Fehl was in confidential communication with the grand jury foreman, and carried information gained to other persons interested," Moody said.

Boasted of Plan

"The state will further show that Fehl asked several people, if the removal of ballot pouch stickers, was sufficient to prevent a recount, and when told it was not, declared, some other way will be found, and further said there would be no recount, and that Ralph Jennings will never be sheriff," the prosecution said.

The state attorney said the state would prove that Fehl opposed the appointment of a night watchman for the courthouse, following the robbery; that Fehl had attempted to issue warrants for the arrest of officials actively engaged in ballot-theft investigation, and was halted by a court injunction; that Fehl was around the courthouse all evening, while the robbery was in progress; that Fehl's associates acted as guards and that Fehl attended a meeting in the county judge's office late in the afternoon of the robbery date, when plans "for getting rid of the ballots" were discussed.
