Temperance, Not Abstinence

With national repeal virtually assured and nearly half of the states abrogating prohibition, the W. C. T. U. continues its fight on many fronts with as much fervor as characterized its pre-prohibition efforts. Whether its futile uphill fight may be laid to prophetic courage or pathetic stubbornness is hard to determine. The following resolution might appear ridiculous to anyone not knowing the sincerity back of it:

"The Jackson County Woman's Temperance Union in its second meeting of the year, reverently pledge anew our loyalty to the temperance cause with full confidence of ultimate victory." The word "reverently" would appear the only saving feature of this resolution. Certainly, there is slight possibility that any W. C. T. U. member now living will ever see "ultimate victory" in the form of reenacted prohibition. Even the Anti-Saloon league has announced its determination to re-write prohibition into the constitution in case it should be repealed. At best the efforts of these groups is a little misdirected. They show an unwillingness to tolerate and encourage a new national experiment in temperance.

There is much to be gained by the continued vigilance of temperance and anti-saloon workers—some might even say more to be gained during a period when prohibition is being repudiated than at any other time. At the present time there are approximately 28 states which remain statutorily dry pending repeal or sales control legislation. Temperance groups should exercise a strong influence in the formation of this new legislation. They should and will, in many cases; seek out and condemn subterfuges to return the saloon in any form. The Jackson County group has indicated some cognizance of the real situation when it goes on record as opposed to the use of liquor with respect to automobile traffic. It takes no temperance group to realize the dangerous association of these two, but it nevertheless shows a willingness to meet the real situation. A further resolution of this group protests a liquor tax as deriving revenue from the degradation of the people. Another timely, if not altogether practical, stand. It is to be regretted that the Oregon W. C. T. U. hadn't a greater voice in the drafting of the new sales code in this state.

The new code permits the sale of alcoholic beverages not exceeding a volume content of 14 per cent in hotel dining rooms. Whether the elimination of a bar is the elimination of the saloon and whether hotel dining rooms will take on the speakeasy atmosphere is a question that many outside the W. C. T. U. ponder. At any rate we know, from what the older boys tell us, that 14 per cent liquor can produce hilarious intoxication. Temperance, not abstinence, should be the program of temperance workers.

"To Be or Not to Be"

Fifteen-year-old Louis Kastor, Jr., Hollywood high school lad, commits suicide on the plea that home work was more than he could bear. "I'm going where there's no home work. Please do not feel bad. I couldn't have been any good anyway." The tragedy of that statement is not so much in the subsequent suicide as it is in the naivete which promoted its making. The problem of self-inflicted death is not infrequently faced in these times. The dictates of Christian religion have deterred many from the fatal decision. It is possible, however, that the sane reasoning of Hamlet has prevailed with many more. Nobody knows or can know how the "home work" will be apportioned in the after-death. That was the "rub" which decided Hamlet against self-destruction and it may be the regret of young Kastor at the present time. The sober-thinking person will prefer to cast his lot with the known quantity, no matter how severe.

Were you among the Washington rooters who became rabid Giant fans when a lily-voiced radio announcer from Medford emulated the sport with his panned intonations of the play by play broadcast?
