Oregon to Be One of U. S.
Wild Life Study Centers

Conservation of what is said to be Oregon's third greatest resource—wild life—is to be furthered through establishment at Oregon State college of one of eight regional wild life research and educational centers through a cooperative arrangement between the U. S. biological survey, the state game commission and the college.

This is to be much more than a state project, it is pointed out, but Oregon was selected as the only federal-state center of this kind on the Pacific coast because of the unusual abundance and diversity of wild life resources in this state and because of the educational opportunities available at OSC.

In connection with the research work, which will be supported largely by the cooperating federal and state agencies in headquarters and with facilities supplied by the college, the state board of higher education has just approved a degree curricula in fish, game and fur animal management under the school of agriculture.

Such educational arrangements were desired by the federal government as a necessary part of the conservation center, where students can be trained for state and federal service, or for positions as game managers of estates or clubs, land using industries or for private ventures in fur or game farming.

In no other state are conditions so ideal for research with such a wide range of wild life on such a large scale, it is pointed out. The largest herd of wild antelope and the second largest herds of elk are in this state, and now the largest wild bird refuge in the United States is established at Malheur lake.

At the same time, it is shown, training facilities are broader at Oregon State college than elsewhere for this purpose because of availability of existing work in the school of science and in the veterinary medicine and other departments in the school of agriculture.

Those acquainted with possibilities in this field look forward to the time when wild life will not only be a state and national asset on public lands, but will also afford a profitable side enterprise for farmers. The whole program is to be developed with due regard to the present livestock and general agricultural industries.

A PROPHECY

Significant economic developments to be expected in the next decade are listed by a prominent business writer as follows: (1) Higher standard of living. (2) Continued advances in technical processes of production. (3) Factory built houses, better and cheaper than hand made houses. (4) Somewhat cheaper money. (5) Faster travel. (6) News printed by radio. (7) Mechanical cotton picker, revolutionizing the South. (8) Cheaper electric power. (9) Better distribution of goods; more chain stores. (10) Another depression, five or six years hence, preceded by an inflationary boom.

TWO QUESTIONS ANSWERED

Why is it that one farmer raises 100 bushels of corn to the acre, and the other one, on the other side of the fence, raises 25 bushels to the acre? Why is it that one farmer produces 100 pounds of pork on five bushels of corn, and another uses 25 bushels? Not until power machinery, scientific principles of soil fertilization and restoration, rotation of crops, diversification of crops and economical feeding are applied to the farm, will the farmers' problem be solved, says a farm authority.

BANKING READY

NEW YORK. — There is abundant evidence that banks are in an unusually favorable position to finance a period of industrial growth, says the June issue of "Banking" published by the American Bankers Association.

An official survey on June 10 indicated that the Government of the United States, through its loans, was the potential owner of more than half of the existing world stocks of American cotton.

When shopping, please mention this paper.

Some business men have visions of greater things, but in carrying out their plans they forget the Golden Rule and go only far enough to miss their goal of achievement and their plans result only in a mirage.

Classified advertising is considered the most effective means for securing direct results at the lowest cost.

In the heart of the average man this venture into higher taxes is a mystery. It brings on little ills and frets. The multitude of taxes upsets the mind and one is worried as to how to pay them and what they are used for. Many of the taxes seem to be caused by dreams of the New Dealers. It is never well to dream except it be in bed—and even then it's likely to end in a nightmare.

Almost every successful business man considers the good will which he has built up through years of continuous newspaper advertising and honest dealings as his one big asset.

A whole lot of cities are long on good starters, but short on good finishers.

Too many men are so intent upon admiring their own methods, their own progress, their own wisdom that they do not have time to observe their own faults.

Farmers Take Advantage of Federal Housing Act

More business was transacted with the farmers under the modernization credit plan of the Federal Housing Administration during the month of June than any other month of its existence, according to a report from Washington, D.C.

More than 1600 farm modernization credit loans were extended through financial institutions approved by the Administration during the month. This was a gain of approximately 300 over the number of loans extended during May. The June credits totaled $633,503.50. Since the inception of the modernization credit plan, 7,589 farm loans have been made totaling $3,114,419.09.

California led the United States during the month of June with 307 credits extended in the amount of $145,272.80. New York was second with 157 credits totaling $66,961.93 and Michigan was fourth with 96 credits totaling $31,237.

Arizona, which was third, rose from three loans extended during February, 1935, to 114 during June.
