INTERESTING NEWS ITEMS FROM HERE AND THERE

A mechanical cotton picker invented by John and Mack Rust was given a practical demonstration recently at Stoneville, Mississippi. It did in eight hours what ordinarily would require 82 men to do in the same time. The owners announce that they will lease the machines and not sell them. Objections to the mechanical picker are that it will throw out of employment a great number of people who have no other employment, that it gathers some leaves and foreign matter and lowers the grade of the pick, that it can only be operated on level ground. Since 1850 about 2000 applications have been made for patents on mechanical cotton pickers and over 1400 patents have been granted. The Rust machine is by far the most successful yet produced. The United States Treasury has announced the approval of a design for 25,000 half dollars to commemorate the Centennial of Bridgeport, Connecticut. The new coins bear the likeness of P. T. Barnum as circus fane. The coins are being issued as a memorial to Barnum's "civic and philanthropic" contributions to Bridgeport. Bob Burns, the Arkansas radio star, who is well known for his jokes and his bazooka, has closed a contract with the Paramount studio from which he will receive $60,000 each for three pictures.
