> > EASTERN STATES.

Ingalis and Blackburn. Washington, D. C. March 7.—Yesterday the Senate resumed consideration of Wilson's amendment to the pension bill, and it was lengthily discussed by Ingalls, Teller, Platt and others. The Chair took the floor, and replying to Beck said the election of Grover Cleveland as President was a precedent showing that no man of the country, however profound his ignorance, however unpenetrable his obscurity. or however degrading his antecedents, might not aspire to a nomination to the presidency by the Democratic party. The assertion that half the enrolled soldiers of the war had applied for pensions was a mistake. In answer to Beck's in-quiry, "Where is all this going to stop?" Ingalls said: "It is going to stop when all the arrears of pensions are paid; when every soldier who served in the war is paid from the day he incurred a disability; paid from the day he incurred a disability; when every surviving soldier is put on the rolls. That is where it is going to stop. If you don't like it make the most of it."

After eulogizing the army Ingalls said in conclusion: "We propose to pass this bill, and imitating the language used on the other side of the chamber, I hope it will pass the other House of Congress, and if it does, let the President veto it at his peril."

his peril."

Blackburn rejoined. He knew of but one sin that the President had committed. It was that having defeated Ingalls' party at the polls, he had governed the American people so efficiently, so honestly, with such a clean handed administration, as to doom the last of the Republican aspirants to the presidency to despair and disaster. Referring to Ingalls' assertion that McClellan was allied to the confederacy, Blackburn said: "The gentleman from Kansas in his political zeal has not spared even the sanctity of the grave, but has dragged up for victims of his partisan abuse such men as Hancock and Me-It was that having defeated Ingalls' party abuse such men as Hancock and Mc-Clellan, whose unblemished characters are fit to adorn the brightest pages of American history." In conclusion Blackburn said: "Party-man as I am, partisan as I confess myself to be, I sincerely trust that I may never find my term of public service prolonged to the day when without warrant or excuse, I will turn deliberately to traduce and abuse men who liberately to traduce and abuse men who while living were honored by all men."

COAST NEWS.

Pearl Page and Her Pal. PORTLAND, OR., March 6.—The examination of C. M. Harding and Pearl Page in the police court this afternoon, showed almost conclusively that they robbed the man, G. Dickinson, of at least three hundred dollars and a gold watch and chain valued at $190, by steering him into Pearl's room, and going through his pants while he was asleep. She claimed that she took the money and jewelry only to keep till morning, but she and Harding were found together at the Merchant hotel, and no doubt robbery was intended. She is said to be the wife of a wealthy business man of San Francisco, but be-came infatuated and ran away with Harding. Both were held in one thousand dollars bail, in default of which they both went to jail. The watch and $160 was recovered.

THE NEW FISHERIES TREATY.

A Little of Information and Explanation by Secretary Bayard.

Amendment of the urgent deficiency bill to strike out the following paragraph "And the public printer is hereby di-rected to rigidly enforce the provisions of the eight-hour law in the department under his charge," having been reached, Hoar inquired of Hale why those lines should be stricken out. Hale said there were persons in the department working by the piece who desired to work more than eight hours, who preferred to work twelve hours, and the adoption of the item might be construed to make these men stop work at the end of eight hours. The resolution might be used to compel good workingmen to stop work after eight hours, and to allow new, untried, green hands to be brought into the office. Hawley said the provision, if it had any meaning at all, was an attempt to forbid man to work more than eight hours; therefore, in behalf of workingmen, he protested against it. It seemed to him a tocols relating to the fisheries treaty, together with a letter from Secretary Bayard. Secretary Bayard says: "An inspection of this documentary history will serve to demonstrate the practical and important results accomplished by the treaty now pending before the Senate, by which the question of in-terpretation and administration of the treaty of 1818 between the United States and Great Britain is transferred and ele-vated from the obscurity into which it had been suffered to lapse since the date of that convention, and its restoration from the practical control of minor and local officials of the Canadian maritime provinces. Uhtil the treaty now pending was concluded no available remedy seems to have been supplied for the inconsist-encies, incongruities and unjustifiable construction of the treaty of 1818 to which our fishermen year after year have been subjected, and which, by the pro-gress of gradual encroachments of Ca-nadian legislation and local port regula-tions, had almost converted their privi-leges expressly reserved by the treaty leges expressly reserved by the treaty into sources of inconvenience and expense. The pretext or causes alleged for arrests, fines, detentions and other embarrassments to American fishing vessels during the years 1886 and 1887 were based upon alleged infractions of the treaty of 181s, or of Canadian laws passed in professed execution of that treaty. All such vexations action as is recorded in the lists of seizures, etc., is met and rendered impossible of occurrence in future by the provisions of the treaty now before the Senate, and the amplest enjoyment by United States ishermen of treaty rights and customary hospitality due under international law and comity is secured in ports and har-bors of eastern Canada and New Found-

PORTLAND LETTER. Along the Wharves-Exports and Imports

- Knilroad Business. From our regular correspondent.

PORTLAND, OR., March 3, 1888. I didn't get down among the docks and depots in my former letter. If you think we do nothing in the shipping line, just take a walk over the Morrison Street bridge and treat yourself to a good look up and down the river. If you were there now you might count twenty-three sailing vessels loading, unloading, anchored "in the stream," or waiting to be escorted to the sea. Besides this you may see at any time one or two huge ocean steamers receiving and discharging immense quantities of freight; ferry boats constantly moving back and forth, between this city and Riverview, Sellwood, East Port-land and Albina; fine stern wheelers coming and going to and from Astoria, Vancouver, Cascades, and up Willamette points; add to this the rushing to and fro of switch engines and constantly moving trains in the various railroad yards that surround the city, and you piece of demagogism.

Quite a lively debate ensued between Hoar and Hawley, which finally terminated by Hale withdrawing his amendment.

The President has transmitted to Construct that pretty correctly represents the every day appearance of that part of this thriving commercial city. But I was going to tell you something about our shipping. During the year 1880 seventy-nine vessels cleared this port, correctly represents the every day appearance of that part of this thriving commercial city. But I was going to tell you something about our shipping. During the year 1880 seventy-nine vessels cleared this port, correctly represents the every day appearance of that part of this thriving commercial city. carrying away to foreign countries 2,500,-000 centals of wheat, valued at $3,000,000; 324,000 barrels of flour, $1,200,000; 126,000 ases of salmon, $710,000; 3,156,000 feet of lumber, $35,000. To different ports of the United States we shipped 1,000,000 centals of wheat, valued at $1,277,000; 134,-600 barrels of flour, $562,000; 12,500,000 pounds wool, $2,256,000; 360,000 cases salmon, $1,900,000; 2,900,000 pounds of hides, $217,000; 1,900,000 pounds of hops, $215,000; mill stuffs, barley, oats pota-toes, leather, tallow, butter, eggs, pig iron, fruit, furs, stoves, oils, lumber, etc., sufficient to make a total value of all ex-ports $14,000,000. The following figures are not the exact amounts, but are as close as can be represented in round numbers. I didn't start out with the intention of boring you with statistics; I just wanted to tell you what all these ships were doing, and then I thought you would like to know what they were carrying. Well, you see we they were carrying. Well, you see we bought of the foreigner $700,000 worth of goods, but while doing so sold him $5,000,-000 worth of our own products, and that's the way to do business; that's why we are flourishing. It strikes one comically to notice the difference between the forcign export and import lists. Among the latter are found gun wads, $57; clay pipes, $617; lak, $150, from England.

Out of inflicted upon United States fishermen, the whole fleet of 1887 but four were and as neither convention contrived any American. Why is this? Well, there Well, there remedy or provision against their renewal are several reasons. Prior to the out-and repetition, it became necessary that break of the rebellion America owned and repetition, it is became necessary that a remedy should no longer be improvided. It is believed such remedy is the war it was almost entirely annihil-practibable and fully supplied by the ated, and has not been rebailt to any treaty now pending, and that by its terms extent, because railroading promised greater returns on investment of capital about that time. That is one reason. Another, and probably the principal one is that Congress made a law prohibiting Americans from purchasing foreign manufactured vessels and sailing them under American flags. The object of this law was to build up ship-building industry at home, but it operated exactly the re-verse. As iron and labor were so much cheaper in England, Americans could standing of his rights and duties whilst not compete with them. Of course we within the jurisdiction of waters of Cancan make wooden vessels, but they are so out of favor among shippers, and it alty, necessity or convenience may sug- costs so much more to insure their cargoes that they are completely left out in

In the depot line there is nothing here to brag about in the way of buildings-in fact there isn't a decent passenger depot in the city-but there are long strings of freight houses, and the freight that is hauled in them daily is enormous. The cars of the N. P., O. R. & N., U. P., and O. & C. west side lines are all loaded and unloaded in the big yards at the north end, which is the busiest place of the As soon as the railroad bridge is completed, we are to have a fine depot on this side of the river, and other terminal facilities, besides the big building at Albina.
