Another Great Man Declines. PENDLETON, OR., March 8, 1888.

To my many friends who have so earnestly solicited me to become a candidate to the presidency, I wish to state that, owing to failing health, I will be compelled to decline the nomination for that exalted and honorable position if tendered me.

I trust that my many friends who have so persistently urged my candidacy will become reconciled to this disappointment. I have been afflicted with rheumatism for the past year, and now my eyes are failing me, and I could not see to go to Washington were I elected; in fact, I now feel that I shall have to leave Oregon, and perhaps the United States, for a while, and return to Missouri, where I hope to regain my health.

Trusting that my Democratic friends will be able to select some other available candidate with the necessary Jeffersonian qualifications, I respectfully, but firmly and positively, decline to become a candidate.

J. H. TURNER. P. S. I see it has become fashionable to decline nominations, hence I decline.

J. H. T.

He Will Marry a Rich Woman. Several youngsters, since the departure of Professor Morris, the phrenologist, have amused themselves by feeling the heads of their playmates. The other day a bright little girl in the upper end of town mounted a chair, and laid her hands knowingly and Morris-like on the head of her small brother, accompanied by this speech: "Bob F—, you have a fine brain and will marry a beautiful lady with a large amount of money, but you will have to be careful, as you will have an insatiable appetite for whisky when you once get started." Bobby having had his attention called to the dreadful habit that is overshadowing him has made a firm resolve never to touch liquor, but he is determined that the first lady, with a large amount of money, who proposes to him he will marry off-hand, without quibbling and other procrastinating arrangements.

A Sad Death. Mr. Clark Wood received a telegram from Weston last evening, saying that his sister, Miss Edith Wood, was dead, having died in the Walla Walla hospital, where she was taken several weeks since, in order that she could have the attention of better nurses and physicians than she could at her home in Weston. Miss Wood was an accomplished and popular young lady, having many friends in Pendleton and other parts of the county. The blow was sudden to them all, and falls with great force upon Mr. Clark Wood. He and Mrs. G. A. Hartman, an aunt of the deceased, left on this morning's train for Weston, to be in attendance at the funeral, which occurs from the home of the bereaved parents at Weston this afternoon.

Robbed on the Rails. This morning there appeared before Recorder Crews one Mary Harris, who claimed to have been robbed on the train yesterday between Walla Walla and Pendleton, of her ticket and $60 in money. She is from Dayton, and on her way to Nebraska, but the loss of her ticket compelled her to stop here. She had a young man arrested on suspicion, but nothing could be proven against him, and he was turned loose. If she has been the dupe of a professional traveling sharp, any hope of recovering the lost property would be nonsense, as their plans are usually so well laid as to defy detection. We hope the unfortunate lady may yet find the lost valuables and go on her way rejoicing.

"Thank you," as the man said to the kerosene, when it offered to blow him up.
