ANOTHER REFORM MEASURE.

The electioneering of the last few weeks has suggested that it would be a good reform to have a law passed to confine all candidates immediately after their nomination for office, in a building to be known as a candidate's prison, and there keep them until the election is entirely over. This should be done in order that campaign lies could not be indulged in and personalities scattered over the land. Candidates in the candidate's prison should be fed by the State and supplied with reading matter and other luxuries by their friends. Then there would be no "rings," no combination, no schemes, no falsehoods, and no misrepresentation in the field of politics. Every candidate would have the same show, and an honorable man would have at least equal chances with a villain. Then to have the candidates in prison would be a novel experience as the "fitness of things" would be apparent. It would be something like justice and altogether refreshing. Of course the newspaper men would have to be suppressed in some way, but this could be easily accomplished by the delinquent subscribers making a promise to "pay up" in case the newspapers were "shut up."

This suggestion is rude, but it is ample to convey the idea intended. Doubtless our readers will see the point, and many additional ideas will be developed and a great reform will assume shape by the time of the next election. The candidates, of the past and future, perhaps, will be able to assist in bringing about such a reform, as it is plainly in their interest, and at the same time, the interest of their constituency.

MEDICINE FOR THE POLITICIANS.

In our dispatches to-day it is mentioned how astonishing it is that so little enthusiasm is indulged in at St. Louis when Cleveland's name is mentioned, and that many politicians accept his nomination as the sick accept their medicine. This is doubtless true; the politicians are well aware that Cleveland is the strongest man in the country for the office of President, and although he is not to their liking, he is the most acceptable to the people, who will rally to his support.

This lack of enthusiasm on the part of the politicians is encouraging. It shows that they are obliged to do the people justice, to put up a man favorable to them, instead of to themselves. The people will no longer stand neglect, and must have men as candidates who believe that a "public office is a public trust." The favor in which Cleveland is held by the politicians is one of the greatest signs of his strength. The politicians have been having it their way long enough; the people are going to have it their way a little while.

The politicians are obliged to take their "little medicine."

It will do them good. It is to the interest of the masses that they are obliged to take it.

The Cincinnati Press Club has sent us an invitation to be present at the "Centennial of the Ohio Valley and Central States," which commences business on July 4th and retires on October 27th, 1888. We appreciate the kind invitation, but owing to the State of our finances we are forced to decline, however our best wishes are with both the club and the Centennial.

To-morrow the Democratic National Convention convenes in St. Louis. The ticket nominated will probably be Cleveland and Thurman, and the platform will be so plain that "those who run may read." The daily EAST OREGONIAN will contain a full report of the doings of the convention by telegraph from our own special correspondent.

BENTON LEADER: The price of wool has declined and the Republican papers are quick to attribute it to the Mills bill. But the Oregonian said Tuesday that the price of range cattle is lower than ever before. Yet there is no wool on cattle.

This election being about over, the papers of the State will now devote their energies to gathering news again.

Frank Downey,

Col. Robert G. Ingersoll, in his Memorial day address at New York city, described the ultimate of America as follows:

"I see a world of peace, in which no exile sighs, no prisoner mourns; where work and worth go hand in hand; where the poor girl trying to win her bread with the needle—the needle that has been called the asp for the breast of the poor—is not driven to the desperate choice of crime, or a death of suicide or shame. I see a world without the leger's outstretched palms, the miser's heartless, stony stare, the cruel eyes of scorn. I see a race without disease of flesh or brain, shapely and fair, with harmony of tone and function."

The Sunday Oregonian contains a long-winded editorial attempting to point out the "false teaching" such utterances contain. The whole criticism is filled with the usual froth of a certain unknown writer on the editorial staff of the Oregonian, whose utterances are always narrow and selfish, lacking comprehension and any idea of the fitness of things.

This writer is one of those men whose religion comes out of books, and who hears sermons from the mouths of his kind. He never sees sermons in the handiwork of God—in stones and brooks—whose "false teachings" have led him to believe only one false doctrine. Such a man tries to prove the future by the past, or in other words, the roads before us are like those over which we have journeyed. It is his narrow way of looking at things. He fails to realize growth; he fails to comprehend what earnest men are capable of; he fails to see what true justice will do when once established. Because we have lived in a world of shame and corruption, greed and filth, is no reason that we will forever do so. To point back at the nations of the past, as a sample of our growth, is to compare the rickety vehicle of travel of ancient days to our marvels of elegance of transportation of to-day. Men of the past in their generation have failed to comprehend what the present generation are accomplishing. Our wildest imaginings will not cover the reality of a future age, but some men are so conceited, so selfish and so narrow that they are confident that times as is the greatest that can be and ever will be, and the Oregonian writer is one of them. His extravagant utterances fill space in a good newspaper and keep intelligent typewriters busy and that is about all. Such men have to be divorced from their "old-time hobbies" before they can see the application of such readings of the future as indulged in on "Memorial Day" by kind-hearted, non-ingenuous whose only cauter is treasonable to the same "false doctrine" that has made his critic narrow, prejudiced and almost a hater of men, at least of those who differ from him in opinion.

This significant reward appeared in the Portland papers several days before the election:

$250 Reward.

We will pay the above reward for the first man arrested and convicted of illegal voting or bribery at the forthcoming State Election. WM. CHURCH, JR., Chairman Democratic County Com. H. K. LYNN, Sheriff of State Central Committee for Multnomah County.

Does this not show that Oregon is badly in need of an "Electoral Reform law?"

It was Gresham, who, as postmaster-general, gave to the nation cheap postage. Mainly through his efforts it was that letter postage was reduced from 3 to 2 cents, and the allowed weight increased. Every time you mail a letter think of Gresham.—Oregonian.

Yes, think of Gresham, and then think of Cleveland, who is for "tariff reform," which means dollars in the pockets of the people where cheap postage saves cents.

The Oregonian, editorially, most of the time, is a reprint of the magazines and encyclopedias.
