TO-DAY'S TELEGRAMS.

DARING ROBBERS. They Board the Train, Kill the Baggage Master, and are Routed by a Brave Engineer. CINCINNATI, June 8.—A daring attempt was made to rob a train near this city this morning. Two robbers from the platform of the baggage car shot through the window, killing the baggage master instantly. They then mounted the tender and were met by the brave engineer, who knocked one of the robbers stiff and threw him from the train, which was going at full speed. The train slowed up, and the robbers were seen escaping from the train in several places. A large posse was formed and are now scouring the country. No arrests have as yet been made nor has the man thrown from the locomotive by the engineer been found.

THE OLD ROMAN. He Will Take the Stump in Support of Cleveland and Thurman. COLUMBUS, Ohio, June 8.—The Thurman Club of this city gave a grand demonstration last night, ratifying the nomination of their idol, Allen G. Thurman, for Vice President. The "old Roman" made a great speech which was listened to and applauded by assembled thousands. Mr. Thurman gave evidence of great vigor, both mentally and physically. He will take the stump in the forthcoming presidential campaign and make a strong fight for the Democratic party on the principles so plainly stated in the platform of that party.

THE WHEAT MARKETS. Still About the Same—Firm Holding of Cargoes. PORTLAND, June 9.—Wheat advices received in this city report quiet markets everywhere; those of this country being weaker, if anything, while for cargoes there is a firm holding by American sellers. San Francisco options are weak and lower. Chicago closed yesterday with 85 1/4 for June and 85 1/4 for July.

BRUTAL FIENDS WANTED. An Aggregate Reward of $2,000 Offered for Their Capture. WINTERS, CAL., June 8.—One hundred armed men with bloodhounds are scouring the country, searching for two men who brutally assaulted a citizen named Woughtell few days ago. It is believed that the guilty parties are concealed in a ravine near this place. The aggregate reward offered for their capture is $2,000.

CLEVELAND AND TARIFF REFORM. Henry George so Declares and Says He Believes that the Ticket will be Triumphant. NEW YORK, June 8.—Henry George in this week's issue of his paper unreservedly declares for Cleveland and tariff reform. He believes that Cleveland and Thurman will be triumphantly elected.

THE FINN SHOULD SUCCEED. LOS ANGELES, June 8.—A plan has been discovered to be on foot here to purchase the entire oil territory of Southern California by an Eastern syndicate, and put the entire product on the market at one time all over the country, in order that the monopoly of the Standard Oil Company may be broken.

Train Robbers Annihilated. NOGALES, June 8.—A sheriff's posse had a light to-day with the Sonora train robbers and succeeded in completely annihilating the entire gang. One was killed, two badly wounded and the others captured unharmed.

Killed by a Falling Tree. SEATTLE, June 8.—Edward Bon, a White River farmer, was crushed by a falling tree to-day while engaged in cutting timber.

Open to all. SAN FRANCISCO, June 8.—The supreme court has decided that the Klamath salmon fisheries are legally open to all.

Sent the News to His Mother. J. L. Rand, the newly elected district attorney of the Sixth Judicial District, is about the happiest young man in Baker City, and his friends are happy too. He is a well respected young man, and more than that we believe he will discharge the duties of the office to which he has been elected with considerable ability. Yesterday, after figuring up his majorities in the several counties and making himself certain of his election, he marched straightway to the telegraph office and sent the tidings of his good luck to his dear old mother in New Hampshire. Mother will be proud of her boy when she receives his telegram.

Father Duffy's Monument. Niles & Vinson received the contract for the Father Duffy monument. It will be ten feet high, Italian marble, surmounted with a cross with the inscription: "I am the resurrection and the life," and in the field of the die his inscription, his monogram "F. D." in front of the cap. On one side of the field will be engraved a galley, and on the other, an open bible. The cap will be supported by four columns, very nicely carved and the beautiful memento, worthily bestowed by a faithful flock, to a good shepherd, will be erected Aug. 15, and will cost about $600.

A camp meeting will be commenced at Lexington June 14, by the M. E. church. Several ministers will be in attendance, and everybody is cordially invited to come.

NOMINATING CLEVELAND.

The Speeches Made at the St. Louis Convention, Nominating and Seconding the Nomination

Amid great enthusiasm and applause Dougherty, of New York, ascended the platform to the right of the chairman, and addressed the convention as follows: I greet you, my countrymen, with fraternal love. In your presence I bow to the majesty of the people. This sight itself is inspiring, the thought that it inspires is sublime. You come from every State and territory, from every nook and corner of our vast-bound continent. You are about to discharge more than an imperial duty with the simplest ceremonies. You, as representatives of the people, are to choose a magistrate with power mightier than that of a monarch, and checked and controlled by that supreme law of a written constitution. Thus impressed, I ascend the rostrum to name the next President of the United States. New York presents him to the convention and pledges her electoral vote. The delegation from the thirty-eight States and all the territories are assembled without caucus or consultation, ready simultaneously to take up the cry and make the vote unanimous. We are here, not, indeed, to choose a candidate, but to name the one the people have already chosen. He is the man for the people. His career illustrates the glory of our institutions. Eight years ago unknown save in his own locality, he for the last four years has stood in the gaze of the world, discharging the most exalted duties that can be confided to mortal man. He determines that, not of his own choice, but by the mandate of his countrymen and the sanction of heaven, he shall fill the Presidency for four years more. He has met and mastered every question, as if from youth trained to statesmanship. The promises of his letter of acceptance and inaugural address have been fulfilled. His fidelity in the past inspires faith in the future. He is not a hope, he is realization. Scorning subterfuge, disdaining re-election by concealing his convictions, mindful of his oath of office to defend the constitution, he courageously declares to Congress, dropping minor matters, that the supreme issue is the reform, revision and reduction of national taxation—that the treasury of the United States, glutted with unneeded gold, oppresses industry, embarrasses business, and breeds extravagance, centralization and corruption; that high taxation, vital for the expenditures of an unparalleled war, is robbery in years of prosperous peace; that the millions that pour into the treasury come from the hard-earned savings of an American people; that in violation of equality of rights, the present tariff has created a privileged class, who, shaping legislation for their personal gain, levy by law contributions from the necessities of life from every man, woman and child in the land; that to lower the tariff is not free trade, it is to reduce the unjust profits of monopolists and manufacturers. The man who asserts that to lower the tariff means free trade insults intelligence, and we brand him as a falsifier. It is furthest from our thought to imperil capital or disturb its enterprises. We aim to uphold wages and protect the rights of all.

This administration has rescued the public domain from the would-be barons and corruptor corporations faithless to their obligations, and reserved it for frep homes for this and coming generations. There has been no pilfering, there are no jobs under this administration. Public office is a public trust. Integrity demands a guard at every post of our vast empire. While the President has been the medium through which has flowed the underlying attitude of the republic for her soldiers, he has not hesitated to withhold his approval from special legislation wherein inquiry revealed a want of truth and justice. Above all he has frowned upon sectional strife, and sixty millions of free men live in ties of brotherhood, are prosperous and happy.

These are the achievements of his administration. Under the same leader, we are ready to meet our political opponents in high and honorable debate, and stake our triumph on the intelligence, virtue and patriotism of the people. Adhering to the constitution in its every line and letter, remembering that the powers not delegated to the United States by the constitution, nor prohibited by it to the States, are reserved to the States, respecting the voice of our people, by the authority of the Democracy of New York, backed by the Democracy of the entire Union, I give you a name entwined with victory. I nominate Grover Cleveland of New York.

After the wild cheering of 12,000 people following Dougherty's great speech, McKenzie, of Kentucky, then took the platform and addressed the convention as follows: I hear the commission of the State of Kentucky to this convention, and in the name of the commonwealth that has given to that State a Clay and a Crittenden, I desire to second the nomination of Grover Cleveland for the office of the Presidency of the United States. (Great applause and wild cheering.) Within the broad limits of this great land there is but one more popular Democrat than he, and that is the queenly woman he has made his wife. (Great applause.) It must be Mr. Chairman, a matter of felicitation to every good citizen within the limits of our land that the historic White House, around which cluster so many memories that are dear to every patriotic heart, is presided over by a man who has the courage to enforce obedience to bad laws until they are repealed, and recommend the enactment of good laws until they shall be enacted. (Applause.) At the same time its social destinies are guided by the fair hand of the uncrowned queen of our American womanhood. I never intend to let Mrs. Cleveland out of this canvass. (Laughter and applause.) In how significant words, gentlemen of the jury, [laughter,] at your last national convention that Grover Cleveland was loved for the enemies he had made. Still later it was said that he was loved for the rescals he had turned out. [applause,] and still it was said that he was loved for the message he had written. [Applause.] Kentucky loves him for the fight there is in him, [laughter and applause,] and for his splendid racing qualities. [Laughter.] He is as game as Lexington, and as speedy as Tenbroeck. In his earlier form he won the Buffalo majority stake, hands down. Later he cantered from post to pole in the New York handicap, winner by 192,000 feet. [Laughter.] He was then entered against the Florentine Mosaic from Maine [Great applause and cheering,] and won the national Derby by a neck. It does not matter, gentlemen of the Democratic jury, how this national sweepstake shall be made up, whether it be filled up by hyperborean icicles, or Florentine Mosaics, or dark horses. When the race is run through the bulletin boards will show Eclipse first, the balance not placed. [Laughter and applause.]

The State of Kentucky loves Cleveland for the reason that he has had the courage to storm the entrenchments of subsidy and monopoly, by recommending such judicious revision of our tariff system as will secure equality in the distribution of public burdens, and lighten the exactions of labor. [Applause.] He has had the courage to inaugurate a war on that horrible misnomer called trusts. He has had the courage and patriotism to regard the Presidency of the United States, not as a personal perquisite, acquired by purchase, or discovery, or diplomacy or escheat; but he has regarded the Presidency as a great public office, confirmed by the unthought suffrage of the people, to be administered wisely, fairly, and judiciously, impartially, honestly, in the interests of the people. (Cheers.)

Well, the fact of the business is, he has got so much courage that it is unnecessary to enumerate; but there is one thing I want to call especial attention to. While others have written doubtful messages, he has written a message to the present American Congress that has about it the directness and force of a Kentucky rifle, and the executive ability of a dynamite cartridge. [Applause and laughter.] Now, gentlemen, this is one instance in the history of American politics where we have a man who furnishes in his person a first-class candidate and a thoroughly Democratic platform. [Applause.] He has done his duty; let us do ours. [Applause.] I want every Democrat, male and female, [laughter] within the body of this most magnificent deliberation hall in the world [applause] consecrated in the holiest purpose, outside of the Christian religion, I want every one to go home after we shall have closed these exercises with a Democratic benediction, and if it shall please God, to provide that in addition to Grover Cleveland one of the guidons along the clear line of Democracy in its march to victory shall be a red bandana.

In conclusion, Mr. Chairman and gentlemen, I move to suspend the rules and make the nomination of Grover Cleveland for President unanimous. Following McKenzie, Judge H. D. Twigg, of Georgia, said in part: The great State of Georgia, which I have the honor in part to represent on this occasion, is proud to second the nomination of Grover Cleveland; a State which has been conspicuous in fidelity to the great principle of Democracy and economical government under our system, and which has found their highest expressions in his splendid and magnificent administration. [Applause.]

Gentlemen of the convention: Monopoly has said to the people of the South: "You are poor; build up your factories, diversify your industries, Protection has made us opulent; it will make you so, likewise." The State of Georgia, already vocal with the music of a million spindles, has given her reply, lifting aloft her proud and unarmished shield, on which is inscribed her motto, "Wisdom, Justice and Moderation." She has said to this artful bribe: "We may be so, but we are unwilling to grow rich by levying tribute upon the people. [Applause.]

Gentlemen of the convention, twenty-four delegates from Georgia have come to this convention, bearing with them a single commission, and that commission to cast the vote of the State for that leader whom our late convention, in its platform of principles, characterized as uniting the wisdom of Jefferson with the firmness of Jackson and the patriotism of Washington. (Cheers.) What is true of Georgia is true of every State here represented; and it might be truthfully stated, gentlemen, that this vast and grand assemblage of patriots and Democrats may be called but a formal convention, assembled together to ratify the action of the sovereignties which have already spoken. (Cheers.)

Gentlemen of the convention, in 1854 the public career of Grover Cleveland was confined to the limits of the great State which proudly claimed him as her own. To-day, in 1888, his name and fame, and career are only bounded by the horizon of every civilized country upon the face of God's earth. (Loud applause.) He was pledged to the people of the United States in 1854, by those who knew him, his courage, his ability and his patriotism, and he has redeemed that pledge. Thank God, no further pledge is necessary to insure a continuance of patriotic devotion to duty, which has been exemplified by a matchless, unsullied and splendid administration. [Applause.] He has not only won the applause of his countrymen, but the plaudits of the civilized world of "Well done, thou good and faithful servant."

Fellow Democrats, hear me for a moment longer. Whence comes the fact that from every State, from Maine to California, and from the Atlantic to the Pacific, there is among the people comprising this convention of over 800 delegates but one name upon their lips, and but one name enshrined in their hearts. I will tell you why. It is because he has pursued honest methods. It is because he is a stern enemy of robbery; of jobbery and monopoly; [cheers,] because he is such a lion in the path of corruption; because he has laid the foundation of good government, of honesty and reform so wide and deep that the principles underlying our federal system have found their highest, and grandest and best exponent under his matchless leadership. And last, but not least, (hear me a moment longer,) it is because of his bold opposition upon the abuses of the existing tariff. He found the people of the United States were being mercilessly robbed and plundered by the rapacity of monopolies under the specious guise of protection, and when he found that the great agricultural industry of the country, which is the source of all true wealth, was bound hand and foot, it was then Grover Cleveland, matchless man that he is, when he assumed the robes of power, turned his back on the blameworthy expedients of office, and with a swoop like a royal eagle he came to the rescue of a suffering people. I say, gentlemen, the rescue, because though the bill now pending, known as the Mills bill, may be mutilated and emasculated, though it may suffer the fate of all great reforms in the beginning, Grover Cleveland has planted seed which has taken root, and as sure as God defends the right, the country will be redeemed.

A SOULLESS FREE TRADER.

A Republican Protection Organ Sold by a Facetious Free Trader. From the Capital Journal. We cannot award to our neighbor, the Statesman, the credit and enterprise of finding a mare's nest; but he has done the next best thing. He has come across a fellow who has made the wonderful discovery, he has despoiled him of his possession, and imported the natural wonder into this city for the declaration of his readers. It comes to us in the shape of the Mills bill; and that wonderfully progressive town, Cohoes Falls, situated at the mouth of the classic Mohawk, where it was reported, we are told, that all the cotton and woolen manufacturers in that hive of industry favored the Mills bill. This being regarded as a tough story by the Albany Express editor, he sent a reporter a ten mile trip in the cars, to find out the facts. He came back with a wonderful story. It is so good that we produce it as follows: "The result of his investigation shows that instead of the manufacturers all being for the Mills bill they were all opposed to it save one, and he a Democrat of English parentage. The kind of American he is can be seen from statements he made. He gave as a reason for favoring free trade that it would bring employes down to starvation wages and then they would not be able to strike and manufacturers would have no more trouble with them."

If the name of this perfidious free trader could be known we would wager a trifle that it is Dick Hurst. He was a young man during the war, of English parentage, as we are told above, his father an extensive woolen manufacturer in Cohoes. He and a score of others of the same occupation and from the same place, served in the same company with the writer. Private Hurst was the life of the camp; always in some scrape, a torment to his officers, but with a heart as big as a quarter of beef. He was an inveterate jolter, and showed a wonderful faculty for spinning yarns. He and a younger brother have succeeded to the father's business. Dick must be fifty years old now, but is possessed of the same insatiable spirit of mischief.

This Albany reporter would go into his office, with his eyes bulging out, to learn about the reported endorsement of the Mills bill. Such a man would just be Dick Hurst's meat. He would fill him full, and look as solemn as Hippocrates while thus engaged.

It is wonderful how ready politicians are to be gulled when they want to make a point. Our neighbor has cautioned his readers against the campaign liar, and he has himself been sold by the first one he encountered.

A Jail for Sale.

From the Des Moines State Journal. "It has been reported that Black Hawk county has an empty jail at La Porte for sale. There is no doubt about the jail being empty, though there may be, as to its being for sale. But it would not be surprising if several counties in Iowa with empty jails upon their hands wanted to get rid of them as useless property. The enforcement of prohibition is the explanation of the empty jails. The people of Iowa have come to the conclusion that it is a good deal better and a good deal cheaper to have empty jails without saloons than crowded jails with them. Under the old system the placard "for sale" used to be put up over the workman's shop, his store, or his little home. But since the saloons were closed the placard has come down, and now it hangs over the empty jail. Iowa believes in closing saloons, buying school-houses and selling jails."
