TO-DAY'S TELEGRAMS.

THE CHICAGO CONVENTION.

Harrison Nominated for President on the Eighth Ballot—Morton for Vice President Probably to be Nominated for Vice President.

CHICAGO, June 25.—The News gives Wm. Walter Phelps as authority for saying that every candidate but Sherman stands ready to call on Blaine to make the race, but that so long as Sherman has a chance Blaine's friends will do nothing to hinder his nomination.

The Tribune says, New York decided to give Sherman a chance to-day, after first voting for Harrison. The Herald thinks Blaine will be nominated. The Times says Sherman is leading.

10:30 A. M.—Mr. Manly, of Maine, Mr. Blaine's friend, is quoted as saying this morning that Blaine will accept only the unanimous vote of the convention, which at present seems impossible, and he hopes there will be no more voting for Blaine.

11:8 A. M.—The convention called to order.

11:15 A. M.—Boutelle, of Maine, takes the platform to withdraw Blaine's name from the convention.

11:17 A. M.—Boutelle says, without attempting to give construction to language, he will read dispatches from Blaine.

11:21 A. M.—Boutelle reads dispatches from Blaine, at Edinburg, earnestly requesting his friends to refrain from voting for him. Signed: JAMES G. BLAINE.

11:22 A. M.—Balloting begins: Alabama votes Blaine 1; California casts 16 votes for Blaine; Georgia casts 1 vote for Fred Grant.

11:30 A. M.—Maine casts 1 vote for Foraker, and 2 for McKinley; Maryland 3 for Blaine.

New York gives Harrison 72. Ohio votes solid for Sherman. Vote challenged. Delegation now being polled.

11:36 A. M.—In the poll of the Ohio delegation Lockey voted for Harrison.

11:40 A. M.—Ohio votes 45 Sherman; Harrison 1.

11:43 A. M.—Tennessee gives Blaine 9. Hisses. Roll call demanded.

12:37 P. M.—Henderson of Iowa withdraws Allison.

12:46 P. M.—Senator Cullom, of Illinois says "Vote of Allison will go to Harrison."

Colorado gives Harrison 6 votes, Connecticut gives Harrison 12 votes, Iowa, 1 vote for Alger, Gresham 1 and 22 for Harrison.

With Kansas Harrison has gained 49 votes; Sherman has lost 18 votes so far. Pennsylvania will probably cast most of her vote for Harrison. If so, his nomination is assured. Massachusetts gives Harrison 25 votes, New Jersey gives 18 for Harrison. Harrison has with the New York vote 325. A gain of 16. Harrison will probably be nominated this ballot.

Pennsylvania gives Harrison 59.

1:02 P. M.—Harrison has 411 votes. He is practically nominated.

1:07 P. M.—Harrison is nominated for President on the eighth ballot, receiving 544 votes, Sherman 18, Blaine 5, McKinley 4, Gresham 59. There is great confusion in the hall. Delegates are on their feet cheering and the band is playing. Foraker of Ohio moves to make the nomination unanimous and the nomination is seconded by Horr of Michigan, Hastings of Pennsylvania, Henderson of Iowa, Boutelle of Maine, Hammond of California and Davis of Minnesota.

1:35 P. M.—There are loud cries for Depew. He takes the platform.

1:43 P. M.—Boutelle says: "In front of the light will be found the white plumes of Maine's 'Henry of Navarre.'" Great cheering followed, the delegates rising to their feet.

Recess to 5 P. M.

THE SITUATION.

The News of Yesterday Although by Telegraph is Stale at this Time.

CHICAGO, June 24.—The situation tonight may be described as follows: In the convention to-morrow all of the candidates will stand firm. There are no withdrawals. A conference of anti-Blaine men have agreed not to present any candidate for the support of opposition. Indeed it is unable to agree upon a candidate. There is a deep feeling on all sides that the "Blaine or Best" programme is not sanctioned by Blaine himself. Telegrams are expected from Blaine to-morrow.

A GAME OF BASEBALL.

They Got Mad and Refused to Play the Game Out.

PORTLAND, June 25.—The Willamettes and the Portlands played a game of ball at the White House grounds yesterday. At the end of the sixth inning the score stood nought to nought. In the seventh inning the Willamettes made 1 and the Portlands 3. During the eighth inning the game broke up in a row, a dispute having arisen over a block ball; the Willamettes refused to finish, thereby losing the game. An immense crowd was in attendance. Much money changed hands. People who backed the Willamettes condemned them severely for not playing to a finish.

A DEADLOCK.

They Refuse to Pass a Bill for a Public Building in Portland.

WASHINGTON, June 24.—A deadlock occurred in the House yesterday over the consideration of a Senate bill to construct a public building in Portland, Or., continued from evening session till 2 p. m. when the matter was set aside till Thursday next. It is believed the bill will pass, appropriating $200,000.

PORTLAND LETTER.

A Cordage Factory—A Hasty Marriage—Had to Pay a Note.

PORTLAND, OR., June 23, 1888.

I went up to North Fifteenth street one day not long since. Rev. Ezra Haskell lives up there, and I went to interview him about the bay windows and contusions Mr. McElinn erected on his phiz. He had gone to a funeral thereby, missing, probably, the only opportunity of his life of a personal meeting with the E. O. correspondent. Being in the neighborhood of the Portland Cordage factory, I went over and took a look at it. I was agreeably surprised at what I saw—Mr. W. B. Ayer, formerly with J. K. Gill & Co., is superintendent of the factory. I found him in his office and he said he would be pleased to show me around, provided I wouldn't tackle him for an ad. He said they were doing no advertising, as the demand for rope exceeded the supply already.

"I'm surprised to hear that," remarked your reporter. "Most of the local factories I have visited complain that they experience much difficulty in getting jobbers here to take hold of home made goods—that they would pay more for an article made in New York than they would for the same thing made here."

"That has not been our experience," said Mr. Ayer, "and I can't help but think that people who tell you such stories are mistaken. The trouble is these small manufacturers try to build up a business without anything to start with. They make an inferior article, in many instances, and endeavor to dispose of their goods by the 'patronize home industry' cry. Wholesalers who have an established trade do hesitate about taking hold of many articles that are made here by one-horse institutions, and their reasons for doing so are good. Take matches, for instance. There is a little factory here making matches. The proprietor makes a big fuss because Portland jobbers won't handle his goods, when they are cheaper than those imported. Well, the fact is they are not as good. Those large factories in the East, where millions are invested in the business, have established reputations. They have expended barrels of money in perfecting machinery, and they have the business down so fine that a bad case of matches never leaves the factories, while here, with facilities so meagre, a bad article will constantly keep creeping in, and jobbers do not like to handle such goods for fear of injuring their business. The fact is, Portland jobbers are only too glad to deal in home-made goods; and any staple article made here that will stand on its own merits, without the aid of any 'home industry' people will find plenty of eager customers. But come along. Let's look through the factory."

The Portland Cordage Company was organized here a number of years ago. They built a factory and had just got it fairly running in good shape when it was burned to the ground. Not long after a new company was formed and the factory, of which I am now writing, was built. Rope making commenced last March. The building is of brick. The factory is three stories high and covers a quarter of a block. The store room is a large two story structure, in one end of which is fitted up a neat and comfortable office, very ably presided over by Mr. Ayer.

On the other floor of the factory, where we first went I was shown cords upon cords of baled hemp, the raw material from which rope is made.

"This," said Mr. Ayer, "is manilla hemp. It is the best material for rope making in the world, and it is the only kind we use. It grows on the Philippine Islands off the coast of China, and we are four months nearer the source of supply than New York; that is it takes New York city four months longer than it does us to get it. This hemp is about six feet in length, the bunches being about two inches through. It does not have to go through many processes before it comes out rope. First it is put through seven big machines called "drawing frames" which comb all the snarls out of it and make it into one continuous strip. This strip when tightly twisted makes a twine about an eighth of an inch through. These strips are then put through machines called "Jennys," which twists them into cords, and from these cords all sizes of rope are made simply by twisting them together, the more cords the larger the rope. The machines that do the twisting were running so fast I couldn't tell what they looked like. All I could see was the beautiful, white clean looking rope coming out at the other. Rope from six inches in diameter down to binding twine is made in this factory, and Mr. Ayer assures me that there is no better rope made in the world. He says the company have plenty of capital, are perfectly independent and stand ready to start men out on the road selling their goods the moment jobbers here hesitate to handle them. They protect wholesalers by selling in ten thousand pound lots only. The result of this way of doing business, and of making an article of goods that they stand ready to compare with any to be found in the markets of the world, is that they cannot make goods fast enough to fill orders, and are going to increase the capacity of the factory—which has already cost $60,000—one-third this fall. At the present time there are thirty persons employed by this company, and they are turning out an immense amount of rope, dai y, nearly every part of the work being done by machinery of the very best make, and covering all latest improvements.

TUBE LANKS.

P. S.—I have read this over and find I left myself on the top floor of the factory. I don't know why I failed to mention my exit from the building, unless it is that in coming down the stairs from the first to the ground floor I caught my left foot in a wad of hemp and rolled down the last thirteen steps, striking so heavily on the stone floor that my memory was badly scattered, and is not yet entirely collected. It's awful hard for a newspaper man to collect anything anyhow. T. L.

ANECDOTES ABOUT THURMAN.

His Snuff And Smoking—His Bible And the Red Bandanna.

A friend of Judge Thurman, who knows him both in a social and business way, gave some interesting facts to the New York Herald Washington correspondent about the ex-Senator.

"To judge from the newspaper stories," he said, "one would imagine that the Senator was a most inveterate snuff taker. Now, that idea is all wrong. The Senator uses snuff very moderately—in fact, I have often known the snuff in his box to become dry and caked up simply because he used it so sparingly. That shows you how moderate he is."

TEN CIGARS A DAY.

"By the way, did you ever hear anything about the Senator's smoking? No. Well, I thought not. Everybody knows that he is a snuff taker, but few have ever thought about his using tobacco in any other form. The truth is, the Judge smokes more than he snuffs; he will average ten cigars a day."

"Are they good or bad?"

"I am not much of a smoker myself, but I should say they were of average quality and medium strength."

"What kind of snuff does he use?"

"It is the ordinary Scotch snuff, Macca-bay I think it is called. He carries it in a plain box, and, unlike the snuff takers of a century ago, he has no weakness or vanity for fancy or expensive boxes."

THE BANDANNA.

"What is the regulation Thurman bandanna—linen, cotton or silk?"

"Silk, and although some of the papers have said linen they do not know what they are talking about. However, there is nothing peculiar about this bandanna. It is the ordinary kind, such as can be bought in any store, and Mrs. Thurman has bought them for the Judge in this city and New York and other places. And while talking about that let me tell you that when the Judge wears a dress suit he always has a white handkerchief in his pocket."

"What is the Senator's home life like?"

"He is devotedly attached to Mrs. Thurman and his children, a son and two daughters, both of whom are married. He is simple in his habits. There is a good deal of the old school courtliness of manner about him, but he is never austere and frigid, and I have known him to be interrupted in the midst of matters of importance by some pronounced bore and yet he never displayed the slightest signs of impatience."

BIBLE READING.

"The Judge makes a practice of reading the Bible through in three languages every year. Every day he reads a chapter or so in Latin, French and English, and then he compares the three versions to see how they correspond."

Milton is striving to secure a paper mill. Milton is a wide-awake town, and growing more so as it grows older.

The average number of acres of government land entered daily at the Boise City land office is about 100.
