Again the cruel hand of death has separated the husband, the father, from one he loved the best on earth. Before it was a wife, gracious and sweet, a perfect helpmate and companion. Manfully, yet with sorrowful and concealed anguish, the with sorrowul and conceated angush, the loss was borne. But now, all that re-mained, a bright and happy boy, cheerful as a cherub, innocent as an infant, bright and happy as a ray of sunshine, has passed like a beautiful dream into the immedial bacoud. Knowing that he is immortal beyond. Knowing that he is better off with the angels; knowing that his little, innocent soul is sure of eternal happiness; knowing all this, the grave still cannot be robbed of its terrible victory, nor death of its bitter sting. The awful anguish of such a loss is almost be-yond the depth of earthly sympathy, be-yond the reach of earthly consolation. Balm for the wounded heart must be sought from above. Those who know Mr. Ennis, know that he was one of the kindest and most loving of husbands and fathers; those who knew Mrs. Ennis and

A TIMBER CULTURE.

THE STARS VICTORIOUS.

An Interesting Game of Base Ball at Ar-lington-A Large Crowd Witness It.

On Saturday evening's train Pendle-ton's supple nine of "Stars" and a large number of friends boarded the train for Arlington, on a career, as it proved, of victory. The whole party, perhaps sixty in number, were at the start bubbling over with enthusiasm, and some of the crowd expressed it in too obstreperous a manner. The train soon started, amid great cheer ing, on its whirling, winding way down the Umatilla. It was moonlight, and the high, rocky bluifs of the I matilla stood out in bold relief, making an imposing landscape picture, framed, as it were, in the car window. The drowsy Pendle-tonites aroused themselves, and found the Arlington boys awaiting them. Then all climbed the hill into the upper story of the town, and spread themselves over the city, examining every sight and scene

The past few days, if you saw a reling around a central object, it ar and the function of the same sector of the same secto these sandy, alkali hills, extending back for miles, are admirable for the growing of stock of all kinds. Arlington thus becomes the general freight center for millions of pounds of wool and derives much further support as a trading point for stockmon, sheepmen and creighters. The amount of floating money in the place is extraordinary, and the number of saloons and gambling houses there attest its liveli-ness. Everybody seems to be doing a great deal of business, and all the inhab-itants are apparently capitalists, to the extent of having lots of ready cash, at locat. But allough it may have business extent of having lots of ready cash, at least. But although it may be a paradise for business and money, as a residence town it is as near purgatory as one could imagine. Picture to yourself a town con-fined bet seen two steep and rocky hills, with their sides and tops covered with al-kall, and then think of a windstorm, with the dust blowing at forty miles an hour, and thick enough to cut with a knife. Such is Arlington, and the inhabknife. Such is Arlington, and the inhab-itants will tell you the description has not been overdrawn. However, a system of waterworks soon to be established may improve matters some. Well, the ball game must not be for-gotten. The time for the game finally arrived, and the players were taken in hacks to the top of one of the high hills adjacent and told to begin. It was a most disagreeable plact for a ball game, with a wind blowing alkali dust in all directions, and spectators were liferally covered with dusty particles. Betting was determined at the start, but all bets

r-	ly proved their superiority in every way over the Arlingtons, as can be easily learned from THE SCORE:

A Truthful Tale.

A Truthful Tale. If an enterprise or business possesses peculiar merits, they should be recognized and indorsed. Much in little can be said of the People's Warehouse, managed by Falck & Cohen. They purchase goods for cash and sell for cash—an immense ad-vantage over competitors. They have one low and regular price for all goods, and never "sell out for cost." They are contented with little profit, having no huge rents or clerks' wages to pay, and the purchaser therefore reaps the benefit. If you have cash and want to get a good

Growth of Australia.

Mr. Hayter, an Austral'an statistician, Mr. Hayter, an Austral an scattering has been making a series of calculations as to the growth in population and wealth of the Australasian colonies. He is, says the Boston Herald, of the pinion that, at the present rate of increase, in the year 2000 the inhal-itants of Australaska will be been acade 100 000 000 and at that number nearly 190,000,000, and at that time, if not before, the people of that distant section will form no incon iderable part of the inhabitants of the world. That the growth in wealth of the colonies is going on even faster than the increase in population is shown by comparing the The population is shown by comparing the average amount left by each person dying in Victoria in the vears 1872-1876 with similar bequeathed possessions during the years 1882 to 1886. In the former period what may be taken to be the average amount possessed by each person living was $900, while in the last-maned period the amount had increased to over $1,500. The entire field is as good as this sample and will yield fully forty bushels to the acre, which is quite good for spring wheat. Mr. Luke has our thanks for this beauti-ful Eastern Oregon bouquet.

Arlington were quickly taken, and the Pendletons soon became favorites. A new battery confronted the Stars, the Arlingtons having secured one for the oc casion. Arlingtons went first to the bal. Short hits were made and three men were Short hits were made and three nen were quickly retired without a run. The Stars then went in and batted like giants, and, assisted by their opponents' errors, scored five tallies very easily. In the first half of the second inning Arlington was again whitewashed, being unable to bat a hall outside the diamond. More beaue and each bitting was indulged in heavy and safe hitting was included in by the Stars, and at the end of the inning they were contented and jubilant, the they were contained and plantair, the secre standing 9 to nothing. This practi-cally decided the game, although from this time forward the play was very overally contested. They nover became discour-aged, and player, ball with vigor and de aged, and place i out their opponents were more than their match, and an attempt to eatch up to their lead was hopeless. At the end the game stood 16 to s in favor of Pendleton. The game was not remarkably brilliant, and good plays on other side were lew and far between, while errors were abunand far between, while errors were abun-dant. The only fly-catch in the out field was made by Culp. Clark's splendid throws to second were a prominent fea-ture. Ankeny, the little barber, by a pretty stratagem on blocked bases, con-fused the outside and enabled two men to score besides himself. Garson, catcher for the Arlingtons, played splendidly in for the Arlingtons, played splendidly in his position, and proved that he deserved the confidence placed in him by their backers. He was hit on the check by the ball when running to first, and nearly blinded, but after a one inning's rest pluckily stayed with the game.

Phelps, the Arlington pitcher, struck out, according to the score, fourteen men out, according to the score, tourteen men by his puzzling curves, but when he was batted it was with a vengeance, the Stars hitting his delivery safely and with perfect ease in several innings. Still-man's work was of a different sort alto-gether. He only struck out two men, but Arlington's boasted heavy batters were for some reason unable to send the suberg outside the diamond, only one of were for some reason unable to send the sphere outside the diamond, only one or two safe hits being made by them throughout the entire game. A "baby" hit was usually sent to the short-stop or pitcher, and first base could not be reached in time. Taken all in all, the Stars have certain-
