At 9 A. M. Marshal Robinson went to the depot and found nine tramps asleep in a box car.

He ordered them out, when they showed fight. The marshal and one of the depot officials secured iron bars...

and they disappeared over the hill toward the penitentiary. The box car in which the fight took place was spattered with blood.

They will get a warm reception if they return to town.

Little Grasswood Notes. July 9th, 1888. The grain, well everybody knows all about it, is surpassing our expectations.

The yield will be just splendid. Born—to the wife of E. L. Gallaher, on the 6th inst., a son, weight eight pounds.

Both mother and child are doing well. Coyotes are numerous, and they pay frequent visits to the hen roosts.

Th. H. plaintive howl reminds one of early days. It is reported that a cougar was seen hereabouts a few days ago, straying from the mountain fastness.

Captain Allan Shortridge is here from the East, visiting his son. Little Grasswood is blessed with one of the latest improved modern duds.

MR. ENNIS HEARD FROM.

He is now in the "Promised Land," and Describes its Advantages.

The following is an extract from a private letter from Mr. J. P. Ennis, who has purchased a ranch and is residing at San Ysidro, Lower California.

It will be read with interest by his Pendleton friends: I have bought 200 acres in the finest climate and country under the sun.

I paid $12 per acre for better land than is selling near San Diego for from $150 to $750 per acre.

However, lack of society is the principal drawback, which is fast being overcome, as large colonies are coming, and a railroad is assured.

Then, if the stars and stripes were floating over us, not much would be wanting.

The quail and rabbits are as thick here as blackbirds in the East at every water pool or small stream, and the wild bees are so numerous that you must often brush them away to let your horse drink.

Their hives are in the rocks, and contain great stores of honey, and as we have cows, and therefore milk, this is actually the "promised land"—flowing with milk and honey.

The wines in this immediate vicinity are very rich. Mexican tariff laws are almost prohibitory on agricultural products, and we have free access to all of Mexico with our wheat, potatoes and canned fruits.

Prices are very high, with a good market. J. P. ENNIS.

A Poetical Coincidence. The poetical effusionist of the Portland Times must have had Pendleton's John McGarry in mind when he "effused the following, save that the ends of John's whiskers have not yet reached the curling point.

It is quite a remarkable coincidence that there are two John McGarrys in the world, that both have whiskers, and that this piece of execrable poetry written of one would apply equally as well to the other:

John McGarry's whiskers are turnin' green, With all the glory of emerald sheen, And it's a bould lookin' chap he's gettin' to be.

It's the truth we're tellin', do' y' see; For no whiskers like his were ever born, So white, and so natural are they worn.

Reaching down to the laps of his coat With the ends curled up like O'Hooligan's goat.

An. by St. Patrick, his brothers and sisters, The wild winds never blew through McGarry's whiskers.

The Late Train. The west-bound train, due here yesterday evening at 8 o'clock, did not get in until 2 A. M.

It was delayed all along the line by a number of vexatious annoyances, hot boxes predominating.

At Cayuse station it was side-tracked to allow the passage of the east-bound train, adding to the delay.

It is presumed that every passenger on the mentioned train had his little growl about railroad companies in general, and the O. R. & N. in particular, because of the six hours' lateness of the train.

The show-bill car of the coming circus was mainly responsible, furnishing hot boxes and difficulty, and a large incentive for profanity, as long as it remained attached.

Parties of fishermen up the river, who expected to arrive in Pendleton at the usual hour of eight, were especially the victims of misplaced confidence in an "iron-heeled corporation." Next time they will walk.

A Little Matter of Right. W. W. Roper, wife and child left for Portland on yesterday evening's delayed train.

Mr. Roper goes below to have his eye operated on which was injured some time ago during a fire, Mr. Roper being an active fireman.

He has been to considerable expense since he was injured, besides suffering great agony for several weeks. He was working in the interests of property owners when he was injured and he should be reimbursed by the town.

It is nothing more than just. Those people who risk their lives voluntarily to save other people's property should at least have the consolation of knowing that if they are injured or killed that they would be well cared for at the expense of the property owners.

This is a guarantee which should be given the Pendleton Fire Department and which they deserve.

Perhaps an Authentic Rumor. It is considered a prophesy of almost certain fulfillment that the Centerville branch of Hunt's railroad will be extended on to Weston and Milton, and thence to Walla Walla.

This is based on a rumor, it is true, but one which, the EAST OREGONIAN is told, has pretty good foundation. Should this be done, the O. R. & N. Co. will find a still stronger rival in the O. & W. T. R. R., and its powerful ally, the Northern Pacific.

Farmers should begin to feel cheerful over good prospects, and a promise of fair freight rates because of railway competition.

Rather a Giveaway. This is what the San Francisco Examiner advises in regard to the treatment of the delegates to the teachers' convention at that place, to which Pendleton contributed its quota.

To the Public.

Notice is hereby given that on and after July 23d, the undersigned will do a strictly cash business.

All persons knowing themselves indebted to us will please call and settle with cash, or by note well secured. Owing to the great amount of bills outstanding, we are compelled to adopt the above means of business.

This will not be a closing out sale. Our goods will be sold at the lowest possible figure, but not below cost. Notice circulars for prices, etc. B. S. WAFFLE & SON.

A Pocket Book Lost. Yesterday, while driving on Court street, between the Star Bakery and Main Street, a lady lost a slender Japanese leather purse, containing a postoffice box key, a $5 gold piece, one silver dollar, one ten-cent piece, calling cards with name of owner thereon and one postoffice order receipt.

The finder will receive a suitable reward by leaving the pocket-book at this office.
