Hamilton returned last night from a trip to towns along the O. K. & N. representative of Farmers' Mill and Flour Co. He had good success in finding a market for his flour. His original intention was to go to Denver, but he concluded to go farther East than Cheyenne, and shipped all the flour on hand to Custom Mill at that and other people are having some little trouble in the flouring mill question. It was discovered that the man in charge, who was supposed to be a capitalist and was to operate the mill, is not possessed of a single red cent. Nothing is to be done by this discovery, however, as necessary machinery, and the mill will materialize, nevertheless.

Hexter has received a letter from Alexander, who is attending the Grand Lodge of Odd Fellows at Los Angeles, which is quite enthusiastic in tone. Mr. Alexander states that a sum of $15,000 has been spent in the city for the proper reception of the delegates, and that they have been paid like princes. It is expected that 15,000 members will be in at

G. A. Hartman returned last night from a trip to his Weston ranch. He reports that town quiet in the extreme. Being assailed by three disastrous fires, and, to cap the climax, held backward by contentions between its prominent citizens, the town has been nearly downed by its misfortunes. It is still struggling bravely against the current, however, and may yet reach the verdure-clad shores of prosperity.

E. K. Parkes spent yesterday in Walla Walla, and reports the garden city to be showing signs of life and activity. Business men of the place think that the coming of Hunt's railroad is the cause of the prospect for better times. The first iron horse on the new line will roll into Walla Walla in thirty days, so it is reported.

W. E. Crews having resigned the management of the Pendleton baseball club, a meeting was held last night for the purpose of electing a new manager. L. THE WALLA WALLA HORROR.

Particulars of the Discovery of Young's Body—Corpses of White Men Hidden in Chinatown. In the Heart of the City—Talk of Removing the Pest.

WALLA WALLA, Sept. 18, 1888. Your correspondent in his last letter gave an inkling as to what would turn up in one of our alleys, occupied by the Chinese. He has since Saturday evening been busy gathering information and investigating, which led to the result telegraphed you to-day noon.

Sunday evening in company with Marshal Robinson and Officer Smalls, aided by the facts already published, a search was made of the Chinese alley running through between Alder and Main streets, but nothing could be found. The article published first in the Journal and reproduced in the EAST OREGONIAN was read by Mr. Shoo Fly, and he at once gave the alarm, and on Monday, people living in the neighborhood of this alley were surprised to see all the Chinese moving out. Truly, there was something rotten; and again Monday night, by the aid of dark lanterns, the officers named made another search, which again proved fruitless. Late in the night, however, your correspondent, who never says "die" as long as there is hope, succeeded in getting from a Chinawoman, living on Alder street, information that a dead man was hidden in one of the hovels made vacant by the frightened heathens. Locating the house, another search was made, and in a dirty, dimly-lighted den, lying under a bunk, in a curled-up position, was found the body of a white man. The corpse was hidden under old rubbish, covered with boards, and was evidently placed there after death, and in a hasty manner. The writer at once recognized the dead man's face as that of Edward Young, a well known young man, of 20 years of age, for some time in the employ of Wm. Kirkman, as driver of the meat delivery wagon. He is an Englishman, having a father and mother in Liverpool, the sire being an Episcopal minister. Of late, through the extensive use of opium-adulterated cigarettes, he has occasionally "hit the pipe," and one theory advanced is that while so doing, he was overcome and expired. Another theory as to his death is that while going through China alley to his room, in the rear of Kirkman's butcher shop, he was waylaid by the Chinamen, in hopes that they would find keys to the safe in Kirkman's building. An inquest is being held as I write, but I cannot find time to get the result for this mail.

The Chinamen who occupied the building in which the body was found, (three of them), are supposed to have taken the Pendleton bound train Monday. Several arrests are made, and more discoveries are expected. It is suggested that the dug-outs be unearthed, the buildings torn down, and once for all, get rid of this "dead house" in the "city of the living." The reason these dens have not long since been burned out, is because much valuable property on Main, Second and Third streets would suffer, and the suggestion, that these disgraceful, dirty, disease-breeding hovels be torn from the face of our beautiful city, by determined tax paying regulators, is a good one. The sentiment of the community is against all such nuisances, and as our city council fails to find means to extinguish the evil, "1860" will be one of a "1000" who will rid the garden City of Walla Walla Valley of one of the worst curses God placed on earth—a disease-breeding China town.

New Railroad Line.

Supplementary articles of incorporation have recently been filed in the auditor's office of Whitman county by the Washington & Idaho Company. They propose to build the following lines of road and equip them, together with telegraph lines along the same:

A line from Farmington by the most practical route to Spokane Falls. A road from some point on the above line, near the forks of Hangman creek, in a northeasterly direction across the Cour d'Alene reservation to a point near the mouth of St. Josephs on Cour d'Alene lake, thence in a northerly direction along the east side of Cour d'Alene lake to the Cour d'Alene river, thence in a generally easterly direction to the Cour d'Alene mission, thence in a southeasterly direction along the south fork of the Cour d'Alene river to Wardner.

A line from or near Spangle, in a northeasterly direction to a point on the Cour d'Alene lake about five miles north of the mouth of the Cour d'Alene river.

A line from the town of Milo, Idaho, along the south fork of Cour d'Alene river to the town of Mullan, Idaho.

A line from Mullan in an easterly direction by the most practical route across the Bitter Root mountains to Missoula, Montana.

A line from or near Endicott, Washington, in a northeasterly direction to a connection with the line from Farmington to Spokane Falls at a point twelve miles north of Farmington.

A line from a point near the junction of the north and south forks of the Cour d'Alene river, thence along the north fork and Prichard creek to the town of Murray, Idaho, with a branch line from a point at or near the mouth of Beaver creek up said creek to its source.

A line from or near the mouth of Nine Mile creek in a northerly direction along said creek to its source.

Democratic gain in Maine on the vote of 1884, seventeen per cent. Republican gain in Maine on the vote of 1884, ten per cent. These are the cold arithmetical facts against which Mr. Blaine's "political revolution" looks like a sick kitten dying on a chunk of ice.

He Wants to be Protected.

ALBA, Sept. 15, 1888. To the Editor of the East Oregonian.

Protection is a tax on everybody to accumulate money in the pockets of employers.

When the Eagle's tail feathers and the Plumed Knight's whisky bottle are taken from off it, it is simply this: Is it right?

If the voters in Oregon, on November 7th, by their votes decide that Protection is right, then you and Mr. Gambree might assist in making a law next winter to collect a tax of five dollars per head on the inhabitants of our county and pay it to me.

You may call it protecting butter milk. One-third of this money will help to milk my cows and run the ranch, and with the rest I'll get a cayuse and go coaching all over the mountains, like Messrs. Carnegie and Blaine in Scotch highlands.

I am willing to take my whisky and tobacco free; and if protection is to remain and grow bigger, I want my share of it.

LA F. KNIGHT.

The Cracker Creek Mines.

Jim Turner, Jr., who for some time has been sojourning in the Cracker creek mining region, returned last night. From him it is learned that numbers of laborers in the mines have now been discharged, because of the near approach of winter, but that next spring a more eager rush of prospectors and miners than ever is expected. It is stated that a quartz mill will then be erected to crush the large amount of ore already taken out. Many rich mines have already been extensively developed, the owners of one of them claiming to have tunneled into the mountains five hundred feet. With the aid of capital, the Cracker creek country can most probably be profitably developed. Quite a little village has been erected within the past three months in the mining neighborhood, composed mainly of saloons. It is said that almost every man who is not a miner, and can raise the necessary capital, establishes a gin dispenser at the mines, there now being six in full blast.

Republican Papers Bolt.

The Minneapolis Evening Star and Duluth Industrial Age have bolted the Republican ticket. The Star says: "This paper will support Mr. Wilson because he and the platform which he stands upon represent, without equivocation, the principle of tax reduction and tariff reform; because we protest against the principle virtually proclaimed in the Republican nomination that only rich men are fit to hold important office in this commonwealth."

The Industrial Age says: "Contrary to every expressed hope of the industrial element the Republican State Convention nominated W. R. Merriam for Governor. Mr. Merriam represents everything that is vicious in politics and opposed to the working classes. With the limited time to review the nomination and the ill-temper the Age finds itself in at the result of the Convention, nothing can be said this week further than whatever aid is possible will be extended to E. M. Wilson, the Democratic nominee, between now and election day."

The feeling against Merriam is particularly strong in the cities, and it is believed the labor and German vote will oppose him almost unitedly. Wagers are being placed that Wilson will be the next Governor of Minnesota.

Chauncey Talked Too Much.

Chauncey M. Depew has contributed to the Presidential canvass a sensation that surprises and confounds the Republicans. Instead of bearing testimony to the enthusiasm of the English for the Democratic policy and helping the false cry of "free trade," as he was expected to do, Mr. Depew relates this incident which occurred on his travels:

"I met an Englishman, a nobleman of high education, who had traveled all over the world, and much in America, who was in favor of Harrison's election. I was somewhat surprised at it, for Harrison is hardly known over there, and I asked him why. He said it was because a tariff reduction such as was proposed by the Democrats would be bad for the English manufacturers, for it would enable the Americans to compete with them in the markets of the world, while under the present system the Englishman has everything his own way. His opinion was that with free raw materials American manufacturers would become formidable competitors to the detriment of English manufacturers."

The Republican managers have made zealous efforts to have Depew retract or modify this statement so damaging to their cause, but their attempts are unavailing. The story is strictly true and Mr. Depew will not deviate from it.

Why is there no home market for all our domestic manufactures, and last year nearly two hundred millions of dollars' worth of them had to be sold in other countries?

Why do the millers and the meat packers buy the farmers' products and ship them to foreign countries instead of the highly protected industries here consuming them?

The Senate by a majority of one, refused to reconsider the vote by which the Chinese exclusion bill was passed. The vote was about equally divided politically.

Manufacturers threaten to reduce wages if the tariff is reduced. How many of them ever increase wages when duties were increased? Not one.

Speaker Carlisle was received with great demonstrations at his home in Covington Monday. S. S. Cox of New York is Speaker in his absence.

It is now thought the Senate will not permit the adjournment of Congress till about election time.
