discovering a large quantity of cattlemen to the sheepmen was illustrated in a peculiar manner at Lakeview recently. The manner at Lakeview recently. The county pays a bounty on cavote scalps. An old Scotch gentleman came rushing into the clerk's office last week and made the following report. "Mr. Boyd: You issued script for bounty on five scalps from Warner a few weeks ago. Well, sir, last night the varmints got into my flock and killed ton of my sheep. This mornlast night the varmints got into my flock and killed ten of my sheep. This morning I killed two of the cayotes; and, sir, would you believe me! They were scalped; both ears all gone, and their heads all raw. Those blawsted cowboys had lassoed them, rin them down on horseback, and getting their scalps let them go to worry us sheepmen." This was an actual occurrence, and the old gentleman wanted the district aftorney to prosecute the boys, which he could not well do. He, however, offered to exposiniate with them, and talk to them about "free wood," but the old gentleman about "free wood," but the free wool!"

James Clayburn created a sensation in The monster then entered the room and told his wife, who is enciente, that he had come with the intention of killing her, and she screamed for helps. The cry was answered by the landlord, Joseph Truesdale, who rushed into the room at an opportune moment and grabbed the would be murderer just as he was attempting to carry his villainous intention into execution. Truesdale caught the upraised pistol just as it was on the point of being discharged, and as luck would have it, his thumb fell under the hammer, which prevented it from exploding. Truesdale prevented it from exploding. Truesdale wrenched the pistol from Clayburn's grasp and drove the wretch away. But the affair was not yet ended. Clayburn procured a knife and returned.

Stillman, assisted by C. P. Davis.

A Pendleton gentleman beard days ago that Mr. J. J. Dooley, of Baker county, wanted to bet $1,000 on Harrison, and at once telegraphed an acceptance of the wager, but no reply has been research.

Clayburn procured a knife and returned, demanding of Truesdale that his pistol be returned to him, saying that if his demand was not acceded to, he would cut Truesdale, s heart out. The latter then pointed the revolver at Clayburn's breast and told him to go or he would be a dead man, which advice he can be convenient.

pointed the revolver at Clayburn's breast and told him to go or he would be a dead man, which advice he was sensible enough to take.

Then on the advice of a friend, Clayburn procured a buggy and rode to Hilgard, where he boarded a west-bound freight train. Officers were on his track, however, and telegrams were sent all along the line. One of these was received by Sheriff Houser, who cantured ceived by Sheriff Houser, who captured the criminal at Pendleton, Clayburn be-ing aboard Tuesday afternoon's freight. Instead of looking him up, however, it seems that Clayburn's Pendleton friends persuaded. Houser to let them take care of him, saying that they wished to take him to supper. It seems that Clayburn then escaped his custodians by some means, procured a vehicle, and de-parted post-haste for Centerville. But he was not allowed to escape. He was followed by Adam Crosman, a special officer from Latirande, and Sheriff Houser, who returned with him this morning. He was found lying in a drunken stuper in one of the stalls of the Centerville livery stable. As an evidence of his treacherous nature, it is said that Clayburn struck Ben Herrin, who also assisted in the arrest, on the back of the head with his manacled hands. He objected to wearing the bracelets, and in that man-ner took revenge.

Clayburn is now safely secured behind the iron bars of the jail at l'endieton, and will be taken back to Latirande on tonight's train to answer the many charges A. D. Stillman has just received his commission from the governor as notary public for Oregon.

that will be preferred against him for his criminal actions. He will probably be made to suffer the full extent of the law for his misdeeds, which is but meet. He has proven himself to be a dangerous character, and a long term in the penitentiary is none too good for him.

strengthen the business relations between this city and Eastern Oregon, the proprietors of the LAST Oregon, the proprietors of the LAST OREGONAS, on March 1st, 1888, established a branch office in Portland, and employed an agent and correspondent, whise sole business is in the interest of their paper, and whose aim is to accomplish that which Portland so much desires, and which is most advantageous to the people that paper represents—the promotion of harmony between those people and Portland, and the bringing of their trade to this metropolis.

To establish and maintain a branch office by an interior newpaper is a big undertaking, but is a characteristic act of enterprise on the part of the East Orkcontan people and will succeed. Their capital is inexhaustable—it is energy, industry and resolution. Their object is a worthy one and should receive substantial encouragement at the bands of the intelligent business men of Portland. Introduce yourselves to the people of Eastern Oregon by advertising your business among them. By so doing you will help to sustain the office here and enable the correspondent to lay facts before those people that will help to show, not only the advantage of patronizing home market, but also that the business men here are square-dealing and liberal. The East Orrgonian is not a charity patient, appealing to your sympathy for help, but a highly successful and influential newspaper that gives full value for every dollar of patronage accorded it, is engaged in legitimate business, and respectfully solicits your patronage, believing the inducement offered worthy of your favorable consideration.
