enough to insure its passage through the house. A majority of republicans were opposed to the principle of the bill and faithful to the thought and purpose of the president's message. The defeat of the bill was imminent and the prestige of the republican majority in the house was in peril. Then the president was appealed to. It was represented to him that nothing could save the party from humiliating division and defeat, but some sign that he recoiled from the recommendation of his message. The leaders of the party were permitted to suggest that he had changed his mind. But this was not sufficient to bring the republicans into line. The president was again appealed to, and under pressure from the party leaders in the house he personally urged several representatives to support the bill so as to preserve an unbroken republican front in the house. This was the grievous blunder committed. It is grievous and fraught with what dire possibilities, not only to the republican party but to the country, neither congress nor the president could have foreseen. But they must realize now that the tariff section in the Porto Rico bill has caused a storm throughout the country that will not down.

If congress and the president persist in their present course nothing can save the republican party from defeat next November. It will surely cost them the honor of representatives and it may cost them the presidency. Worse than any of these possibilities, it may involve the election of Bryan, with all that that implies. But one course is open to the republican party. Let it face the situation with the only spirit that can compel respect in the presence of a staid and dignified opponent. Let it acknowledge the mistake and make haste to regain popular confidence by undoing the contemplated wrong to Porto Rico.

There is no shame in retreating from the verge of a precipice before taking the first step toward safety. The only salvation for the republican party is through the gate that gives free trade to Porto Rico. The country looks to President McKinley to rise to the full stature of a statesman who dares to acknowledge a mistake and to undo a wrong.

SENSE AND NONSENSE.

A clergyman was called upon to perform a marriage ceremony for a couple in middle life. "Have you ever been married before?" asked the clergyman of the bridegroom. "No, sir," "Have you?" to the bride. "Yes, I have," replied the bride, innocently, "but it was twenty years ago and he was killed in an accident when we'd only been married a week, so it really ain't worth mentioning."

They were speaking of the lawyer. "Why do you chase him about Washington?" one of them asked. "Because, sir," replied the other, with every evidence of deep earnestness, "I happen to know that he once told a client that he had no case, thereby losing a good fee, when he found he was wrong. I have determined to retain, begin the suit and laid the foundation for a good, stiff charge."

What Is It? A man who has been running a race with steam and electricity for years, finds himself suddenly stopped. It seems as if a cold hand clutched his heart. His brain whirled; he can hardly see. "What is it?" he asks himself as the attack passes. If his question meets a right answer, he'll be told that his nature is a warning to pay more attention to his stomach, which is sorely damaged by irregular meals and rich foods.

Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures diseases of the stomach and organs of digestion and nutrition. It eliminates from the blood disease breeding poisons. It makes the blood rich and pure, and furnishes a foundation for sound, physical health.

Keep the bowels healthy by using Dr. Pierce's Peppermint Cure. They don't grip.
