representative man, one that is known to be forceful and independent, the people of Eastern Oregon would likely give him such support as would elect him. Eastern Oregon should have some representation in congress, and at present it has not a particle.

McBRIDE OF OREGON.
Walter Wellman, a Washington newspaper correspondent, writing to the Chicago Times-Herald, an able and influential republican paper, has the following to say of Senator McBride, which the East Oregonian gives space to because of its interest in the people of Oregon:
"In February, 1896, upon the eve of the great presidential struggle of that year, a bill providing for the free coinage of silver came to a vote in the United States senate. There were then eighteen senators from the Pacific coast and Rocky mountain states, and of these seventeen voted for free coinage. Only one, George W. McBride of Oregon, voted against it. The great disparity between the number of votes for and against the one vote against it from that section of the country caused many republicans to regret their party had admitted so many new states and created so many new senators in the far west. Senator McBride, however, knowing well his people, and looking far ahead with prophetic eye, predicted a great change in the near future. 'Wait a little,' he said, 'and you shall have votes enough for sound money from the Pacific coast and the Rocky mountains.'"

Four years later, Feb. 15, 1900, a bill establishing the gold standard came to a vote in the senate. Forty-six votes were cast for it and twenty-nine against it. The majority was seventeen. Of the forty-six affirmative votes eight were cast by senators from the Rocky mountain and Pacific coast states, and one senator from that region was paired for the bill. Thus arose the interesting circumstance and strange fulfillment of a prophecy that but for these nine favorable votes the gold bill could not have passed. Had they been cast on the negative side the bill would have been lost by a majority of one. The manner in which the Pacific coast and Rocky mountain states developed support for gold in four years may be graphically stated thus:
For gold in 1896—One vote, Oregon.
For gold in 1898—Two votes, Oregon; one vote, California; one vote, Colorado; one vote, Washington; one vote, Idaho; one vote, Montana; two votes, Wyoming.

The senator who pioneered this remarkable movement in the far west is now, properly enough, one of the leaders of his party. His courage in standing alone four years ago has not only brought a goodly number of recruits to his side, but it has, aided by his strong qualities as a man and as a senator, given him a high place in the councils of his party. Without ostentation, without self-seeking, without brilliant speech-making or any factitious art of attracting attention, Senator McBride has advanced to the very front rank on the republican side of the chamber. Few men in five years of service have risen to such prominence or attained position in which they could be of so much service to their constituents. The senatorial campaign is now on in his state, and republican senators without exception are glad to hear that there is little or no doubt of his re-election.

Mr. McBride's place in his party councils is best shown by the fact that he is a member of the republican "committee on order of business." This is known as the "steering committee," and its function is to arrange the party policy on the floor of the senate in so far as this can be done without calling a caucus to dispose of disputed questions. The members of this committee are Senators Allison, Hale, Aldrich, Culbom, Wolcott, Sewell, Spooner, McBride and Hanna. It is not only an honor to be on this committee—service upon it gives power and prestige not only to the member but to the state which he represents.
There is an executive committee of the republican congressional committee, the duties of this executive committee being to take charge of the campaign for election of republican candidates for congress. It is a joint committee of senators and representatives, composed of leading members of the two houses, and Mr. McBride is the only member from the far west.

Mr. McBride's standing as a senator is perhaps best shown by his committee assignments. No man can be of great service to his state in either house of congress without special committee connections, for these not only make his rank among his colleagues, but give him the influence which enables him to secure practical results. Though a comparatively young senator, Mr. McBride is chairman of the committee on coast defense and a member of the following committees: Public lands, inter-territorial canals, commerce, forest preserves and Indian depredations. All these are committees of peculiar importance to the section of country which Mr. McBride represents.

When the republican committee on the Philippine islands was made up, there was great competition among senators for places upon it, as it was generally recognized as one of the greatest committees of the senate, scarcely second in importance to the foreign relations committee. With two exceptions all the republican members of this committee are veterans, such as Allison, Hale, Lodge, Proctor and Davis. The two younger senators are Beveridge of Indiana and McBride of Oregon, the latter owing his selection to the special personal study he had made of the Philippine islands.

Senator McBride rarely makes a speech. He long ago learned the lesson which was but recently acquired by another and very eloquent senator, who admitted after his second philippic upon the floor: "Well, I guess it takes more than a big speech to acquire influence in the United States senate." The senator from Oregon is quiet, industrious, methodical; he is popular with his fellow senators on both sides of the chamber; his counsel is often sought because of his good judgment and his help, because of his activity and prestige. He is a senator who "gets things done" and is a credit to the state which sent him here.
WALTER WELLMAN.

DEWEY'S CANDIDACY.
Admiral Dewey is opposed to the re-affirmation of the Chicago platform, and the proponent of the naval hero's presidential hopes are credited with a well-defined movement to invite the support of the alienated democratic wing by a revival of the unadulterated democracy represented by Thomas Jefferson, says a Washington Dispatch. Dewey wants the democratic nomination, and knowing the emphatic endorsements of Bryan by the democratic national committees from every state save the admiral's home state, the belief is well founded that an effort will be made to make Dewey the stalking horse for anti-Bryanites and the bolters of the Chicago convention.

Such are the plans entertained by Dewey's friends. But they suffer no little amount of mortification by the response of mingled ridicule, pity and outspoken opposition which flows in upon the capital from every point of the compass. "Too late" and "presidential entries closed" is the burden of the cry from all quarters. Republicans and democrats alike who allow themselves to pass judgment upon the admiral's ambitions deny the possibility of serious political complications, and emphatically proclaim that McKinley will be the nominee of the Philadelphia convention and William Jennings Bryan will be the democratic presidential candidate.

A Positive Woman.
Emily Coghlan, the actress, sister of Rose and Charles Coghlan, died at Stamford, Conn., Monday, aged 59 years. Her death was unexpected, although it was known that she was very ill. An attack of measles brought about her fatal illness.

A woman has a right to be positive on matters which are matters of personal knowledge and experience. Every woman who has used Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription for diseases of the womanly organs is positive as to its wonderful curative value, and confidently recommends it to similar sufferers.
Women who suffer from inflammation, ulceration, female weakness, or nervous diseases caused by disease of the womanly organs will find a complete cure by the use of "Favorite Prescription."
"Several years ago I suffered severely from female weakness, prostration, and nervousness, and used Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription with splendid effect," writes Fannie Shelton of Washington, D.C., "and I am very grateful for a few years' rest, but if I should have any return of the old trouble would surely try 'Favorite Prescription.' I have recommended it to a number of my lady friends. I always tell them to try a bottle, and if they are not benefited by it I will buy for the medicine. In every case they have spoken in praise of it."
