FOR JUSTICE OF THE PEACE. PETER WEST

Another Attempted Murder. Ed. Allen Comes Near Meeting Fate of J. Henry Miller.

Bob Estes tried to shoot Ed C. Allen at 12 o'clock Monday night in Allen's saloon, because Allen ordered Estes from the saloon and prohibited him from further playing of cards in the place. The attempted shooting occurred at almost the same time of the clock at which J. Henry Miller was shot last fall by E. L. Mills, and it was in the same saloon, and from the same cause of disagreement, Mr. Allen was saved from probable death by the striking of the pistol to one side by a bystander, and the quick disarming of Estes.

Estes was taken to jail, and remained there over night, being taken to a restaurant for breakfast and later on a hunt for bondsmen. So far as they are obtainable at this time, the facts appear to be these: Estes, who frequently plays cards for money, had been going to Allen's saloon at different times to indulge this propensity. Several days ago, Mr. Allen informed Estes that the latter would no longer be permitted to play cards in the place, for the reason that Mr. Allen's customers objected and it was known that Estes was in the habit of playing "a crooked game," and men frequenting the place to play cards were not willing to play with a man who habitually cheated in his games.

Monday night, Mr. Allen, who was himself engaged in a game of whist with some friends in the rear room of his saloon, noticed Estes sitting at a table playing with other men. Allen arose and went to the table at which Estes was seated and said: "What do you mean, Bob, by playing here, when I have told you you couldn't?"

Estes replied that he was merely playing another man's hand, while the latter stepped out for a moment. Mr. Allen insisted that Estes could not play there, and to Estes' question as to what Allen would do if Estes persisted in playing, Allen replied that he would throw Estes out. Estes answered that he guessed he would put a stop to the throwing out, and said also that he would remain just as long as he desired to, and would refuse to stop playing so long as anyone else played there for money. The discussion ended in Allen ordering Estes to leave at once, and upon Estes refusing, Allen seized him and forced him towards the door, having him half way there when Estes drew a pistol and pointed it at Allen.

Before he could get an aim and pull the trigger, Thornton Williams struck it to one side and Estes was disarmed. Estes was arraigned in Justice Rosenberg's court, having him on examination. The court held him in $100 bonds. Estes failing to procure them, remains now in the county jail.

Joe Connelly, who came in from the sheep range today asserts that the clip this year will be three pounds heavier to the sheep than last year, and at least one pound heavier than the average of past years. He thinks the 1903 clip in this county will average about 11 pounds, the wool being of as fine a grade as any ever taken from sheep's backs in this county.

DRAMA OF THE SOUTH.

"On the Suwanee River" Played by a Competent Company. Sterling's "On the Suwanee River," a southern drama in four acts, was produced at the Fraser on Monday evening. It was a highly successful presentation and was enjoyed by an audience which was not so large as the excellence of the attraction deserved.

Stella Mayhew, as "Aunt Lindy," is easily the star of the company, and, indeed, sustains the high reputation she has as a second May Irwin in that class of comedy work. The company's entire was good. The fountain City make a quartet, as on former occasions when heard in Pendleton, brought storms of applause and numerous encores.

The too small audience was by no means a gauge of the appreciation shown by those who were in attendance. About the play is the same charm that is characteristic of all dramas the scenes of which are laid in the southland.

KARSTEN BROTHERS TOOK THE CATTLE

Paid Contract Price at $4.75 After Market Had Fallen. Frank Sloan and A. B. Thompson, the latter the representative nominee for joint representative, were here today from Echo. Mr. Sloan states that Karsten Brothers of Seattle have taken all the cattle they bought early in the season under contract to pay $4.75 and which had dropped to $4 when the contract came to maturity. The firm had contracted about 4300 head, and took them all at the contract price. $2.

The firm has demonstrated their good faith with the stockgrowers thus by taking the cattle at so high a figure when the market had fallen so as to make the deals unprofitable.

Plant Was of One Hundred Barrels Daily Capacity. Telephonic advices from Summerville, Union county, received this morning, say that the Klinehart flouring mill was burned Monday night. H. C. Klinehart, the proprietor, was in Pendleton on Monday, and went on to Portland on the night train.

The Klinehart mills were a fine plant of 100 barrels a day capacity. They were owned by J. B. Klinehart, and were operated by his son, H. C. Klinehart, who had a paying business and whose establishment was regarded as important to that region. Particulars as to how the fire caught are not obtainable at this hour.

NATIONAL PROHIBITION ORATOR.

John G. Woolley Spoke at the Court House on Monday Night. John G. Woolley, who was the prohibition candidate for president and is prominent throughout the United States as a temperance orator, spoke on Monday night at the court house here. His audience was not large, but was quite appreciative of the address. Mr. Woolley is making a tour of the West in the interest of the prohibition party.

Mr. Woolley treated the political phases of the temperance question in his address here, and took ground in favor of concert of political action against the liquor traffic.

A NARROW ESCAPE

Thrilling Experience of a Workman in a Saw Mill. Olympia, May 8.—Charles Patnode, employed in a shingle mill at Sherrlock, took a narrow and dangerous trip from a terrible death on Thursday one over hours of. A portion of his clothes became entangled in what is known as the arbor, an iron frame in which the saw is fastened and which revolves with it. Quick as a flash he was lifted from the floor and buried into the air. In his hurried passage he was thrown over the top of the revolving saw, and a portion of his body grazed it. He landed just beyond the carriage, the only injury he received being a bruise on the hip. His fellow workmen today assert that the clip this year will be three pounds heavier to the sheep than last year, and at least one pound heavier than the average of past years. He thinks the 1903 clip in this county will average about 11 pounds, the wool being of as fine a grade as any ever taken from sheep's backs in this county.

CONSTITUTION OVER PORTO RICO.

A Decision Rendered at St. Paul May Prove of National Importance. St. Paul, May 8.—Judge William Lechman, of the United States district court, has decided that the constitution of the United States extends in all its provisions over the island of Puerto Rico, and that without congress having taken any action.

The case which led to the ruling was an application for a writ of mandamus in favor of native Puerto Rican who was convicted by the military provisional court early in the American occupation and sent here by the war department for confinement in a United States prison.

Judge Lechman is a democrat, who was President Cleveland's commissioner of pensions and was by him appointed to the federal bench.
