Wheat Still Low-Holders Expect Better Prices Before New Season Opens Portland, May 17 .-- The Commercial The horse and collar struck the ground about the same time. After eyeing the collar on the ground Review in its review of the wheat mar-ket for the week, in its issue of today, says: Wheat was not firm during the past week,all the leading markets hav-ing made value losses. The change in the influences underlying the situation is that crop conditions appear in a more favorable light. This is responsi-ble for the present easier feeling. The shrinkage in prices, however, has not been very heavy, and, while it is im-possible to foretell the course which wheat will take, yet the larger portion Review in its review of the wheat mar-
