"The wheat crop of the state of California, "he said, 'will be about 500,000 tons, or only one-third of a crop. The Sacramento valley crop will be very short, due to early rains, which interfered with sowing, and late rains and hot winds. San Joaquin county and the uplands are also hurt by hot winds. Merced and Stanilaus counties will have a full crop. Fresno and Tulare counties, where they had good prospects early in the season, have been hadly injured by rust incident to May rains. The west side of the San Joaquin valley will not have one-third of a crop."
