SWIPED THE GOVERNOR'S WARRANT

MOORE, OF KENTUCKY VIOLATED THE SHERIFF'S CONFIDENCE.

Also a Paper in the Case Missing From County Clerk's Office—Serious Act to Take Such a Document.

Sheriff Blakely and his chief deputy, C. P. Davis, were asked regarding the manner in which the Kentuckians obtained possession of the governor's warrant, after it had once been arrested and proceedings had thereon. Both the officers stated:

"The warrant was placed in our hands for service, which we performed by arresting Bowlin, and placing him in jail here. The warrant was in our possession, where only it properly belonged, as it was our evidence of authority to hold Bowlin, G. C. Moore, one of the two Kentuckians concerned in getting hold of Bowlin, came into this office and asked to see the warrant, stating that he desired to show it to a lawyer, and would return it in ten minutes. He did not come back, nor did he return the warrant. We were unable, after diligent search, to find him or the warrant. Nor could we find Lum Kendall, the other Kentuckian who was trying to get hold of Bowlin. The warrant was in our possession, and neither Moore nor anyone else, could take it away without being guilty of violating the law, both the civil law and the law of courtesy under which attorneys are allowed to borrow papers pertaining to cases in which they are interested, taking them on their honor. It is the first instance in the state that we ever heard when an attorney violated the confidence reposed in him in loaning official documents from the court house."

Stole the Governor's Requirement.

From the county clerk's office someone has taken the copy of the governor's requisition which is on file in the records in the case. It disappeared at the same time the warrant went from the sheriff's office, and Moore and Kendall "vanished" from the town. The force in the county clerk's office looked for the paper, but were unable to locate it. They have not authorized anyone to take the paper from the office. Whoever took it is guilty of violation of the strict order of the circuit court judge made two years ago, prohibiting the removal of papers from the clerk's office without official permission.

The two acts, taking the warrant, by Moore, and taking the paper from the clerk's office, by someone, are serious offenses. Such acts nullify the value of officially recorded or filed papers and documents, and render everyone unprotected from their pilfering.

It is estimated that some unpleasant years of residence in a place enclosed with a stone, a land surrounded by guards armed with Winchester rifles, await the one or ones who took those papers.

DETAILS OF THE INVASION.

How a Trio of Men Tried to Kidnap Bowlin in Dead of Night.

Weston, Or., July 27.—Special to the East Oregonian.—The story of the attempted kidnaping of J. B. Bowlin at Weston on Wednesday night is thus told by a reliable citizen, who was on the ground so soon as the shots were fired, and secured the information at first hand:

"At half past ten o'clock Wednesday night, we heard the screams of women on the streets, and nearly everyone who heard them hurried out to ascertain the cause. Almost immediately afterward, two shots were fired, and a moment later a third shot. Our investigation disclosed that the home of J. B. Bowlin had been invaded by three men, one being Constable J. W. Dykes, of Milton, the others George Reynolds, of Weston, and a mysterious tall man in a linen duster and wearing a mask.

Produced the Stolen Warrant.

"They produced a paper which they purported to read to Bowlin, which was reported to be a warrant for his arrest, and informed him that he was again in the hands of the law. Bowlin at once attempted to read the three men a certified order signed by County Judge Hartman, releasing Bowlin from the recent habeas corpus proceedings, and directing any officer of this county immediately to free Bowlin, if said officer had apprehended Bowlin on any warrant charging him with the crime for which he had already been before the court twice on habeas corpus writs—the charge being that he had uttered a forged deed in Whitley county, Kentucky.

"Bowlin was not permitted to read the court's order, but was ordered at once to accompany the three men, without further talking.

"Bowlin passed into the front room to don his clothing, when the three men followed him, and Mrs. Bowlin, who had gone to call assistance from the neighbors, re-entered the house, carrying a lighted lamp. This she held in the face of the men, so they could not see into the darkness beyond, while Bowlin made his escape, and ran down the street, without hat or shoes, one of the men firing two shots after him as he ran.

Searched Through the Town.

"The man who did the firing followed Bowlin to the corner, where he fired another time. He then went into a saloon, emptied his pistol, refilled it, and then joined his other companions, the three holding a lengthy consultation, and proceeding to make an extended search for the fugitive. They failed to find Bowlin, who had run up Weston mountain, where he found a family to whom he told his story, and arranged with them to communicate with him during the following day.

"The three men had a team tied at the rack at G. W. Proebstel's hardware store, which they later took and rode away. It was at midnight that the three men disappeared, and were not seen again that night. Constable Dykes left in the morning at eight o'clock for his home in Milton, the man in the duster not again showing up. Mrs. Bowlin stated that she knew the last named, recognizing him by his voice and figure, later in the following day.

"The citizens of the town to a man were indignant at the attempt to enter Bowlin's house at night, in defiance of the order of the county judge, and rallied in a body to protect Bowlin from further harm."

WHERE IS J. B. BOWLIN?

Neither He Nor Kentucky Officers Found—Fear He Has Been Kidnapped.

Where is J. B. Bowlin, the man who wasn't kidnaped Wednesday night by Constable J. W. Dykes, of Milton, George Reynolds, of Weston, and a mysterious fellow clad in a linen duster, a mask, and refusing to give his name?

This question puzzled the officers,

INCREASED INSURANCE LOSSES.

Companies Suffer During the First Six Months of 1900.

H. E. Parkhurst, special agent for the New Zealand Insurance company, was at the St. George hotel on Thursday, having come to adjust a loss of 80 tons of hay on the Miller ranch near Echo, belonging to E. Boettcher. Mr. Parkhurst made an interesting statement regarding the increase in the fire losses during the past two years, the figures having been compiled carefully, and being vouched for as reliable. These figures vary slightly from those printed elsewhere the other day, and show that 1900 during the first six months has witnessed an increase of 50 per cent over 1899.

The increase in the fire loss of the United States and Canada during the current year has been so abnormal that interest in it has been awakened in general business circles as well as among the underwriters. Few, however, will be prepared for the actual figures, compiled from the carefully kept records of the journal of Commerce and Commercial Bulletin, which show a total loss of $103,208,900 for the first six months of the year 1900, as against $68,699,75 for the same period of 1899.

The great difference between 1900 and 1899 and 1898 is exhibited by months in the following figures: First six months of 1898, losses, $58,237,100; first six months of 1899, $65,699,750; first six months of 1900, $103,208,900. The increase over 1899 is in destructiveness, which have occurred since January 1, 1900, are presented in this compilation: Philadelphia, Pa., several department stores, $700,000; Lead City, S. D., various, $500,000; Dayton, O., tobacco factory and others, $500,000; St. Louis, Minn., department store and others, $475,000; Newark, N. J., department store and others, $1,000,000; Pittsburgh, Pa., department store, $1,200,000; Ottawa-Hull, Ont., conflagration, $12,000,000; Sandon, B. C., various, $700,000; Constable Hook, N. J., property and oil works, $500,000; Fisher, Wis., various, $300,000; Virginia, Minn., business portion of town, $500,000; Bloomington, Ill., various, $1,850,000; Pierce, Ariz., mining property and mill, $500,000; Moreton, Ariz., mining property, $800,000; Hoboken, N. J., steamship locks, storerooms, ocean steamer and cargoes and barges, $5,350,000.

The officers of fire insurance companies have had a turbulent experience during the past two years. Many companies have been forced to the wall, and others have had their financial strength crippled, and the great success before January, 1901, statements are required to be filed. From present appearances insurance rates will need to be largely increased to keep up with the constant, serious drain on insurance capital.
