SETTING FOREST FIRES IS CRIMINAL.

People of the mountain districts should remember that a law is in existence making it unlawful to leave camp fires burning after departing from a camping spot. The law contemplates the utmost care in the extinguishment of all fires, looking towards the prevention of forest destruction. District Attorney Hailey recently opened up the subject, in a statement to the East Oregonian, and the question is in consequence being generally discussed throughout the mountain states. Newspapers are calling attention to the necessities of the situation, and officials are taking steps to secure observance of the laws.

Preservation of the forests is a vital need throughout Oregon and contiguous states. Timber lands in the eastern states have been completely denuded, and lumbermen have turned to the Pacific slope to secure forest holdings for future supplies of lumber. Vast tracts of land have been taken, and these will be stripped of all trees fit for sawing. Not many years hence, the coast states will be facing a situation like that now existent in the east. Our forests are not inexhaustible.

The question may well be kept before the people's attention. It is one of the most important matters pertaining to the future of the coast region.

ANOMALY OF THE CHINESE SITUATION.

At no time, since the Crusades, have the nations furnished a situation paralleling that now in China. Only one of the great powers, Russia, has formally declared war. She has given the Chinese minister his passports and sent him home. The other great powers permit the Chinese ministers and ambassadors to remain at the capitals at which they represent their government, maintaining friendly relations with the home officials, meeting them in social intercourses, and counselling with them regarding the progress of the hostilities in the Orient. At Washington, Minister Wu is scarcely less popular than he has heretofore been, that popularity having been remarked frequently during the past months.

Notwithstanding this, six hundred foreigners are held by the Chinese government as hostages, which is regarded by diplomats as tantamount to open declaration of war by the celestials; daily come dispatches from China couched invariably in language not different from that which would be employed were the Chinese empire to notify the powers individually that war was on in earnest; the powers hesitate not to say to the newspaper correspondents, through their ministers, that they sincerely believe the imperial government is playing false with the allies, and is temporizing to gain time.

Behind all of the clouds that obscure the horizon, "over China 'cross the sea," may be conditions local in that country materially hampering the imperial government in quelling the disturbances, and which, when explained, will demonstrate the difficulties under which the Chinese empress is laboring. However, these explanations would better soon be forthcoming. Else, something like one million men with powder and ball and fixed bayonets will invade Chinese soil, and wrest that explanation from the reticent empress.

DENOUEMENT OF LI HUNG CHANGISM.

Li Hung Chang visited America and Europe two years ago with not less eclat attendant upon his tour than that which marked the journey of the late General U. S. Grant around the world. Li was honored, courted, feted, wined and dined, and accorded a place among the famous men of the period. He appeared to be of stuff not like that composing the other celestials who have visited this country. He appealed to all as a man of advanced views and lofty ideas. Li Hung Chang's name was entered in the list of those whose influence makes for better things in the coming years.

Yet, today, the world powers believe Li Hung Chang to have engaged in a desperate game of deceit, and that he is to a large extent responsible for the deplorable condition now existent in China. It is a remarkable outcome of a former pleasing incident in the life of the nations. This statesman came out from the far east and brought promise of a newer and better status of affairs in the Orient. Men who were sincere in their desire to witness the emergence of the Chinese empire from the darkness of the past to the light of a higher civilization, cited Li Hung Chang as one of the valid promises of that better time in store for the empire.

But Li Hung Chang's reputation has been darkened, his standing questioned, his honesty impugned. Only by the exercise of his immense power with the empress may he restore himself to his former position among the nations, and, even with the most energetic exertions, it will be next to impossible for him completely to reinstate himself in the high place he occupied before the Boxer rebellion broke out.

REMINISCENT.

Kamela, Ore., Aug. 2.—To the Editor.—Twenty years have brought wondrous changes to the west. She is no longer a frontier. She is no longer unique in her customs and modes of doing business. Progress, like an unseen mantle from the hands of the gods, has silently fallen upon her. It has transformed her, outwardly and inwardly. The pioneer is passing away. His environment is loosing its romantic cast, and the fortune-seeking throng at his threshold has little respect for his institutions or his land marks.

A ride over the Blue mountains in a palace car will tear down a thousand fond dreams. It will upset whole tanks full of sentiment which we had been gathering and guarding for years. The railroad winds around the same canyons which the pack trains followed of yore. But the clink of the flinty hoof, and the jingle of the bell on the old white mare, are absent.

Twenty years ago, this month, the writer rode into Meacham stage station on one of the old Concord coaches, behind four prancing Grand Ronde steeds, driven by "Jimmie Cutter," the veteran driver. The first sight of the station and the surrounding flat was inspiring. There were over one hundred white sailed wagons standing in view, and nearly as many bright camp fires, glowing upon the bronzed faces around.

The gigantic freight wagons, coupled two and three in a string, and the emigrant wagon of the Kansan, equipped with every convenience for camping, were standing everywhere, so close to the road that we elbowed through the line, hubs almost touching. The restless mules were champing their oats, the teamsters were currying and harnessing; the numberless "tow-heads" (now the voters and wives of the Inland Empire) were playing among the smouldering fires, or hunting imaginary Indians in the forest near by.

It was a Babel of voices and songs. Everywhere was the spirit of cheerfulness and joy! The women, worn and weary with months of travel on the burning plains, chatted and sang around the fires. The rough-handed freighters and emigrants exchanged yarns in the bluff, jovial way of the west. Everybody knew everybody else. There were no strangers there.

We unloaded and eat breakfast at the Meacham hotel—a cheerful, home-like place, with table laden with eatables, and a contented atmosphere around, which, alone, was worth the price of the meal. None of your "airs" here. It was a huge, homely building, full of delight for the hearts of way-worn travelers. We rested, and feasted eyes and stomachs. Here was the great divide between the two early civilizations of Oregon. Here were met the home-seeker and the miner, the freighter and the tourist, on a neutral ground of rest.

Soon the great caravan began to move into line. Eastward and westward joint by joint the wondrous, trailing giant fell into the march, and slowly wended onward to its "appointed end." The silvery tinkle of the bells, the crack of whips, the voice of the teamster, the neigh of the horses, the enlivening chuckle of the wheels, and the general animation of that scene cannot be equaled today in beauty and enthusiasm.

After the last straggler had departed and the last sound had died on the whispering forest, we looked in wonder on that deserted camp ground. The smoke was still rising from the dying fires. The deep cut wheel tracks of the giant wagons, told the story of an opening empire. What busy throngs were anxiously awaiting at the far-off camps, for the coming of these sturdy Argonauts! What hopes burned in the breasts of those weary emigrants, looking eagerly toward the setting sun! They held in their hearts the majesty of the commonwealth we now love and enjoy. This camping ground is one of the pages of history in western civilization. This deep-worn road, along which rolled the multiplying hordes, is one of the arteries through which poured the golden streams of western vigor and enlightenment.

But Meacham is herself no more. She wears no familiar token of the past. Her hills have been stripped of forests. The monotonous whistle of the locomotive and lazy roar of wheels is all you hear. The Log Cabin eating house, a fine specimen of workmanship, is built in imitation of an old style New England log dwelling, but it lacks the towering stone chimney. Its steep roof and pointed gables, its rough-bark walls and lime filled cracks, bear close resemblance to the original, but the surroundings drive away the spirit of the original. Here you know nobody. Everyone is in a hurry. They jostle against you, rushing around their little world. Thousands of cords of wood are piled on the old camp ground.

The grounds around the famous log cabin are covered with tents, but these campers have none of the joys of the past. You see no black coffee-pots bubbling over with that invigorating elixir; and the immortal frying pan is absent, with its odor of sizzling bacon and steaming flap jacks! These campers wear none of the grime of the plains upon their brows, but look like they had just emerged from a new band-box. We are going down the sunset slopes. Soon the pioneer and his beloved attributes will be but a memory.

Backache.

So many women suffer from it. It mars alike their hours of work and pleasure. Backache is generally a symptom of derangement of the delicate womanly organs. It is useless therefore to apply plasters and similar local treatments. A cure can only be effected when the cause of the ache is removed. The use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription will cure the debilitating drains, the inflammation, ulceration and displacement which cause backache, sideache, headache and many other aches and pains. "Favorite Prescription" contains no alcohol and is absolutely free from opium, cocaine and other narcotics. It agrees with the most delicate persons.

"I took your medicine six months and I feel now like a new person," writes Miss Annie Stephens, of Bellville, Wood Co., W. Va. "Have no backache, no headache, no pain anywhere. I took seven bottles of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, and seven bottles of his 'Golden Medical Discovery.' I think there is no medicine like Dr. Pierce's. I can't speak highly enough of your medicine for it has done me so much good. I don't feel tired as I used to, nor sick. I feel well and think there is no medicine equal to Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription."

CANCER

Sufferers from this horrible malady nearly always inherit it—not necessarily from the parents, but may be from some remote ancestor, for Cancer often runs through several generations. This deadly poison may lay dormant in the blood for years, or until you reach middle life, then the first little sore or ulcer makes its appearance—or a swollen gland in the breast, or some other part of the body, gives the first warning.

To cure Cancer thoroughly and permanently all the poisonous virus must be eliminated from the blood—every vestage of it driven out. This S. S. S. does, and is the only medicine that can reach deep-seated, obstinate blood troubles like this. When all the poison has been forced out of the system the Cancer heals, and the disease never returns.

Cancer begins often in a small way, as the following letter from Mrs. Shirer shows:

A small pimple came on my jaw about an inch below the ear on the left side of my face. It gave me no pain or inconvenience, and I should have forgotten about it had it not begun to inflame and itch; it would bleed a little, then scab over, but would not heal. This continued for some time, when my jaw began to swell, becoming very painful. The Cancer began to eat and spread, until it was as large as a half dollar, when I heard of S. S. S. and determined to give it a fair trial, and it was remarkable what a wonderful effect it had from the very beginning; the sore began to heal and after taking a few bottles disappeared entirely. This was two years ago; there are still no signs of the Cancer, and my general health continues good.—Mrs. R. Shirer, La Plata, Mo.

SSS is the greatest of all blood purifiers, and the only one guaranteed purely vegetable. Send for our free book on Cancer, containing valuable and interesting information about this disease, and write our physicians about your case. We make no charge for medical advice.

The New York World,
Thrice-a-Week Edition
ALMOST A DAILY—AT THE PRICE OF A WEEKLY.
The most widely circulated "weekly" newspaper in America is the Thrice-a-Week edition of The New York World, and with the presidential campaign now at hand you cannot do without it. Here are some of the reasons why it is easily the leader in dollar a year journalism.
It is issued every other day, and is to all purposes a daily.
Every week each subscriber receives 18 pages and often during the "busy" season 24 pages each week.
The price is only $1 per year.
It is virtually a daily at the price of a weekly.
Its news covers every known part of the world. No weekly newspaper could stand alone and furnish such service.
The Thrice-a-Week World has at its disposal all of the resources of the greatest newspaper in existence—the wonder of modern journalism—"America's Greatest Newspaper," as it has been justly termed—The New York World.
Its political news is absolutely impartial. This fact will be of especial value in the presidential campaign coming on.
The best of current fiction is found in its columns.
These are only some of the reasons; there are others. Read it and see them all.
We offer this unequaled newspaper and the weekly East Oregonian together one year for $2. The regular subscription price of the two papers is $2.50.
The Tri-Weekly World and the Semi-Weekly East Oregonian one year for $2.50.
