powerful class of trusts. It was suggested by Senator Sherman as a feature of the original McKinley tariff, but of course was not adopted by the agents of the campaign contributors who passed that unpopular law.

Publicity as to the affairs of great corporations has been proposed as a remedy for their extortions by some of the ablest students of the problem. Interstate regulation, the only way in which the federal power can be directly applied, is another essential remedy, but the interesting disqualification as to watered stock and hardly have been meant for the past—for what is done—as retractive laws are unconstitutional. The intent doubtless is to prevent future stock-watering, which would cure a very great evil. Mr. Bryan's latest idea of a federal license under severe restrictions was very wisely omitted from the democratic platform, as in operation it would be apt to prove a prolific source of corruption and barter.

The difference between the two platforms is that, while both deplore and condemn the wrongs and evils of monopoly, the democrats offer specific remedies, while the republicans commit themselves only in generalities. The question for the country to consider, therefore, is which party in view of its record, character, antecedents and leadership, would be more likely to make an honest and determined warfare upon monopolies, to enact stringent laws for their suppression, and to appoint an attorney general who would with sincere conviction seek to enforce every law which congress might pass for this purpose.

Met not the impartial citizen, examining the history of the past four years and the platforms of the two parties with an unprejudiced mind, concerning that the democratic position is much stronger and more satisfactory. Is it not fair to say of the republican pledges: "Actions speak louder than words; behold the monopolies which your laws have fostered—the criminal trusts which your administration has left unopposed?" And is not this judgment confirmed by President McKinley's significant omission of any reference to this subject in his speech of acceptance?—New York World.

The announcement comes from Washington that the United States has determined to sound the European powers and Japan on the subject of future policy in China. The present state of affairs cannot continue indefinitely. The concern must reach some understanding as to its next duty and right. The dispatches indicate that there is no native central government in China. Peking is under foreign control, and steps are being taken toward the setting up of provisional government. The emperor, empress regent and Prince Tuan have escaped, and direct communication with them is for the present impossible. This is a perfectly valid reason for declining to enter into peace negotiations with Li Hung Chang or any other friendly viceroy, but it is not a good reason for continuing hostilities or for adopting the dangerous policy of drift which can land us only in one direction, that of some entangling alliance with some one or more of the foreign powers.

THE TWO ANTI-MONOPOLY PLANKS. The resolutions of both parties on trusts and monopolies show the effect of public opinion. The democrats are more conservative than four years ago, the republicans more pronounced. The democrats refrain from anything that might be called an attack upon property. The republicans show a lively appreciation of the increased public hostility to monopolies, though they say:

We recognize the necessity and propriety of the honest co-operation of capital to meet new business conditions. Corporations should be protected in all their rights, and their legitimate interests should be respected. Each of these declarations recognizes the necessity and the advantage of the corporate form of business organization and of the economic gain in legitimate consolidations of capital.

Both platforms condemn improper, criminal and dangerous monopolies. The republicans say: We condemn all conspiracies and combinations intended to restrict business, to create monopolies, to limit production or to control prices. The democrats declare: Private monopolies are indefensible and intolerable. They destroy competition, control the price of all material and of the finished product, thus robbing both producer and consumer. They lessen the employment of labor and arbitrarily fix the terms and conditions thereof, and deprive individual energy and small capital of their opportunity for betterment.

The democratic declaration is more detailed and emphatic, but the republican resolution is explicit and inclusive. The purport of both is substantially the same. The differentiation of the platforms appears in the remedies proposed. The republicans say only: We favor such legislation as will effectively restrain and prevent all such abuses, protect and promote competition, and secure the rights of labor and all who are engaged in industry and commerce.

This is wholly general and undeniably vague. What "legislation" will, in the republican view, accomplish the admirable end mentioned? Is the Dingley tariff such a law? If so, why have trusts increased and monopolies multiplied under it as never before in the history of the country? If this law promotes and protects monopoly, why have the republicans not corrected it during their full control of the government? If the Sherman anti-trust law is adequate, why has no honest attempt been made to enforce it? If it is inadequate, why has it not been amended.

It was this consideration which led the democrats to proclaim their remedies and pointedly to declare that: Tariff laws should be amended by putting the products of trusts upon the free list, to prevent monopoly under the plea of protection. Existing laws against trusts should be enforced, and more stringent ones must be enacted providing for publicity as to the affairs of the corporations engaged in interstate commerce, and requiring all corporations to show before doing business outside of the state of their origin that they have no water in their stock, and that they have not attempted and are not attempting to monopolize any branch of business or to limit production of any articles of merchandise.

These remedies are specific and promising. The first one—the withdrawal of tariff protection to industries that establish a monopoly or that sell their products cheaper abroad than at home which has long been advocated by the World—would reach a

Rain or Shine,

The station agent is on duty. On his exact communication of train orders depends thousands of lives, and millions of dollars in property, each day. In his haste he runs out in the rain or the snow and is unprotected. Then comes the sequel—bronchitis, or some other disease of the respiratory organs. The most effective remedy for bronchitis or pulmonary disease is Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. Almost all remedies prescribed for such diseases contain opium or some narcotic which soothes by stupefaction. Golden Medical Discovery contains neither narcotics nor alcohol. It stops coughs by curing their cause. It heals weak lungs, builds up wasted tissues, and promotes the health of every organ of the body.

"I am a railroad agent," writes E. R. Staples, vice of Barclay, Oregon, Co., Kan.: "and four years ago my work kept me in a warm room and stepping out frequently into the cold air gave me bronchitis which became chronic and deep-seated. Doctors failed to reach my case and advised me to try a higher air, but, fortunately for me, a friend advised me to try Dr. Pierce's medicine. I commenced taking your 'Golden Medical Discovery,' and by the time I had taken the first bottle I felt better and after taking four bottles my cough was entirely gone. I have found no necessity for seeking another climate."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate the stomach, liver and bowels.

Dr. Shiloh's Cough and Consumption Cure

This is beyond question the most efficacious Cough Medicine ever known to science. A few doses invariably cure the worst cases of Cough, Croup and Bronchitis, which its wonderful success in the cure of Consumption is without a parallel in the history of medicine. Since its first discovery it has been sold on a guarantee, a test which no other medicine can stand. If you have a cough, we earnestly ask you to try it.
