THE COAL MINERS DEMANDS.

The eye of the nation is turned on the coal miners strike in Pennsylvania. The sympathy of the great mass of the people is with the toilers, as it should be. Public opinion is also on their side. The demands of the coal miners may be summed up as follows:

Wages to be paid semi-monthly in cash.

An advance of 20 per cent in wages less than $1.50.

An advance of 15 per cent in wages of $1.50 and less than $1.75.

An advance of 10 per cent in wages of $1.75.

Abolition of the sliding scale of wages.

Abolition of the company doctor system.

Abolition of the company store system.

A ton of coal to be actually 2240 pounds, and not as now, over 3000.

Price of powder to be $1.50 a keg, and not as now, $2.50. The company gets it for 90 cents.

Those who do not mine for a living will wonder what there is unreasonable in the demands relating to powder, the company store and the excessive ton. Pennsylvania was ever the home of the protected manufacturer and the robber baron. Special legislation, coupled with a monopoly of nature's great wealth in that state, gave to a few men great fortunes and these are being used to crush the independence of labor and make of men "driven cattle," forcing every pleasure out of life to them.

THE PRESIDENTIAL CAMPAIGN

Four weeks from next Tuesday fourteen million American citizens, more or less, will go to the polls and declare their preferences for president and vice-president. The campaign which has been dragging wearily along for nearly three months, may be said to have been without excitement and even has lacked interest. Up to the present time there has been less enthusiasm on both sides and much less public interest than four years ago. The meetings in all parts of the country have been rather perfunctory and the speeches of the "spellers" are not generally read. There are no indications that the voters are greatly concerned about the election, but it is apparent that considerable quiet thinking is being done.

The problem before the democrats is how to capture several republican states. The election in Vermont and Maine, though encouraging when compared with the utter disruption of the party four years ago, show plainly enough, what was obvious on the adjournment of the Kansas City convention, that there is no hope of getting any electoral votes for Mr. Bryan in New England.

The democratic leaders in New York city resolved some weeks ago to make a fight in the Empire State, New Jersey, Connecticut, Maryland, Delaware and West Virginia, and a still warmer fight is being made in the middle west. The chances are excellent in New York, Maryland and West Virginia, and better still in Indiana and Illinois. They are even good in Wisconsin and Michigan.

The republicans are stiff in their claims. They hold as sure for McKinley: The six states of New England, 39 votes; New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania, 78; Minnesota, Iowa, North Dakota, California, Oregon and even Washington, 42-232 in all, or eight more than enough to elect. They may lose New York and Washington.

The democrats hope with the help of Gov. Lind to carry Minnesota, though it gave McKinley 53,000 plurality, and in 1898 Gov. Lind was the only candidate on the fusion ticket who was elected. Mr. Bryan says they "ought to carry Ohio." They are making a sharp fight in Illinois—though the republican pluralities in the last three elections seem to offer little hope, having been 134,000 in 1894, 142,000 in 1896 and 43,000 in 1898. Indiana is conceded by the republicans to be doubtful, with the prospects in favor of the democrats.

Giving Mr. Bryan, therefore, Delaware, Maryland, Kentucky and Indiana—a gain of thirty-eight votes over 1896—and counting for McKinley as gains the states carried by the republicans since 1896—Kansas, South Dakota, Wyoming, Washington and one in California, a total of 22—Mr. Bryan would have a net gain of 16, giving him 192 electors, or 32 short of a majority. New York would give this, with four to spare; but where else they can be had is the pivotal question of the campaign.

Victory rests with New York. There the fight will be warmer and warmer as it draws to a close.

THE COAL MINERS' FULL DINNER PAIL.

If there is any class of working people in the whole land who are entitled to a "full dinner pail" it is the workers in the anthracite coal mines of Pennsylvania. Theirs is an arduous and hazardous employment, pursued for the most part far down in the bowels of the earth and away from the light of day. They are employed by monopolists who act in concert, and having no competition that need serve to keep their prices low, they sell, and every household knows how mercilessly that absolute power conferred by monopoly is exercised in levying tribute upon every hearthstone. They are, therefore, well able to pay just and even liberal wages. Besides this, they are in the very nerve center of the republican party of the United States, and "the full dinner pail" is the special mission of the republican party in this campaign.

Do the Pennsylvania miners have a full dinner pail? Not if the statement published by the miners is true. According to this the average annual wage of the miner is less than $250, some receiving more than this amount and some less.

But let us take the average—$250. This would be about 68 cents a day. Suppose the miner has a wife and five children, a family of seven in all, which is not far from the average married man's burden, he would have less than 10 cents a day for each to live upon. After paying his rent, clothing for the family, doctors' bills and incidental expenses, it does not appear that much will remain with which to fill the dinner pail.

A discussion has been going the rounds of the question whether it is possible to buy enough food for 15 cents a day to sustain life. Here are thousands who have only 10 cents with which to buy food, clothing, shelter and all the other comforts and conveniences of life. Let a person in fairly comfortable circumstances consider this condition and try to figure out how a person can keep body and soul together with any such wage, and then listen to Senator Hanna declaim about the full dinner pail of the working people under republican rule and the share of each one in the McKinley prosperity.

This is not all nor the only grievance complained of by the miners. They charge the coal corporations after paying this small amount for their labor, in their unmeasured greediness, endeavor to get a large part of it back from them by unfair means. The miners are compelled, they say, to buy all their supplies from the company's store at exorbitant rates; that they have to pay $2.75 a keg for powder which costs the company $1; that they have the pay of a doctor deducted from their wages whether they need his services or not, and, finally, that to earn the pay agreed upon for mining a ton of coal, they must, in fact, mine nearly two.

If all these things are true, then the condition of the black slave in the south before the emancipation was one of comfortable ease and affluence compared with that of the white slave of the coal monopolies today. If Senator Hanna purposes to fill the dinner pails of the working people here is an opportunity to begin.—Baltimore Sun.

THEY ARE LINCOLN'S WORDS.

One Lloyd Jones, seeking notoriety, furnished the Chicago Tribune of August 26 a statement which has been reprinted by the Hanna bureau and copied extensively by the McKinley organs, in which Mr. Bryan is accused of making false quotations in his Indianapolis speech, says the Oregon State Journal. Mr. Jones says:

"Among those to whom Bryan gave the credit for utterances purely his own were Abraham Lincoln, Daniel Webster, Thomas Jefferson and even the Scriptures."

"Then Mr. Jones goes on to specify as follows:

"Again, in defending his advocacy of ratifying the treaty with Spain he (Bryan) quotes Lincoln as saying:

"Can aliens make treaties easier than friends can make laws?"

"Lincoln never said this at all. The language is that of Napoleon Bonaparte after the battle of Marengo, the greatest imperialist who ever lived since the days of Caesar and Alexander."

Mr. Jones either does not know what he pretends to know or is a deliberate liar. He is either ignorantly or maliciously trying to misrepresent, slander and injure a man who is the soul of honor and whose truthfulness, sincerity and honesty in words and in deeds are known and recognized throughout the world and thereby to destroy the hopes and interests of the millions of people he represents.

We have neither time nor opportunity to examine all the writings and published sayings of Lincoln, Webster, Jefferson and the others from whom Bryan may have quoted and whose words Jones pretends to know by heart, but we have hunted up the first one and find that Bryan made the quotation verbatim, just as it is, and that Jones has lied. When a witness is proven to have made a false statement deliberately, as in this case, all of his statements are unworthy of belief and it is not necessary to examine further a discredited witness. Mr. Bryan's word is good against a man who tries to injure him by publishing a gross falsehood as Jones has done and as these are doing who circulate and approve his falsehood.

In the Messages and Papers of the presidents, by Richardson, published by authority of congress, Volume 6, page 10, we find in Lincoln's first inaugural address, delivered March 4, 1861, the following quotation, precisely as used by Mr. Bryan and which Jones says was never uttered by Lincoln at all but by Napoleon Bonaparte, "the greatest imperialist who ever lived."

"Can aliens make treaties easier than friends can make laws?"

It occurs in the midst of his appeal to the South to remain in union in the following paragraph:

"Physically speaking, we cannot separate. We cannot remove our respective sections from each other nor build an impassable wall between them. A husband and wife may be divorced and go out of presence and beyond the reach of each other, but the different parts of our country cannot do this. They cannot but remain face to face, and intercourse, either amicable or hostile, must continue between them. Is it possible then, to make that intercourse more advantageous or more satisfactory after separation than before? Can aliens make treaties easier than friends can make laws? Can treaties be more faithfully enforced between aliens than laws can among friends? Suppose you go to war, you cannot fight always, and when, after much loss on both sides and no gain on either, you cease fighting, the identical old questions, as to terms of intercourse, are again upon you."

Symbols of Success

A vacant chair and a portrait on the wall—strange symbols of success! Yet, in many a home these are the symbols of the success of the man who did not find time to care for his health, or neglected the increasing warnings of disease which Nature gave him.

When the stomach is "weak" and food is imperfectly digested and assimilated, it is only a question of time until the break-down comes. The stomach is the very center of vital power and must be kept in health if sickness is to be avoided. Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. It increases the supply of pure rich blood, and gives the body strength to withstand the strain put upon it by the struggle for success.

"I was a sufferer from indigestion, but after trying several eminent physicians, I got a cure from Frank Merriam, of Independence, Jackson Co., Mo. His 'Golden Medical Discovery' cured me of indigestion, constipation, and other ailments, and I feel better than I have for years."
