They are Deserting Mr. McKinley

Two Press Dispatches from the East:

Monticello, N. Y.—George Waller, who was for eight years editor and proprietor of the Sullivan County Republican, the official organ of that party in the county, has decided to support Bryan.

In the Monticello Watchman, Mr. Waller gives his reasons for refusing to support McKinley. He is a good speaker and will devote his time from now until election to the task of showing that trusts and imperialism must be destroyed at the ballot box if the country would thrive.

Charleston, W. Va.—Joseph Beury, a wealthy coal operator, whose home and business interests are along the Kanawha river, in Fayette county, was nominated by the republicans for presidential elector. Since his nomination Mr. Beury has taken no part in the campaign, and has made no contributions to the committee. No one, however, was prepared for the announcement that he will vote a straight democratic ticket this fall. Mr. Beury is a large employer of labor and his influence is great.

NATIONAL DEMOCRATIC TICKET

FOR PRESIDENT,

William J. Bryan.

OF NEBRASKA.

FOR VICE PRESIDENT,

Adlai E. Stevenson.

OF ILLINOIS.

FOR PRESIDENTIAL ELECTORS,

W. M. PIERCE, of Umatilla.
DELL STUART, of Multnomah.
J. WHITAKER, of Benton.
E. KRONER, of Multnomah.

THE WHEAT MARKET.

Pacific coast farmers are vastly more interested in the Liverpool market and in ship charters than they are in the outcome of the presidential election. The price of the wheat raised here is, of course, determined by the price there, less ocean freights and commissions. The only argument in favor of the Far Eastern policy proposed by President McKinley is that it promises to augment to some extent the value of the cereals and other foodstuffs produced here on the coast. There is no doubt, however, that the continuance of this policy will for a time keep down the price of wheat here, for the reason that it will keep in use for governmental service many vessels which otherwise would be employed in the commercial carrying trade of the world. The increase in the demand for bottoms, caused by the imperial policy of President McKinley and that of Great Britain, has, beyond doubt, depressed the price of wheat here by raising wheat charters to an abnormally high figure. And the farmer is thus made to bear the burden of the waiting until future events shall have corrected the prevailing unfavorable conditions.

ATHENA'S ENTERPRISE.

Athena people propose to add a manufacturing industry to the numerous institutions now thriving in that enterprising town. One manufacturing plant properly planned and efficiently managed will do more for Athena than the election of any presidential candidate who ever was placed before the people. Athena is gaining a name for enterprise and "hustle," and is regarded as the best town of its size in Oregon. It is safe to assert that the country immediately contiguous to Athena produces more foodstuffs annually than any similar area in the world. As the country develops and the population increases Athena will develop and increase fully as rapidly, for the reason that her citizens are awake to their opportunities.

THE INDEPENDENT VOTE.

On this page today are printed two brief dispatches from the East, which tell of two men prominent in their home localities who have deserted the McKinley banner, and ranged themselves upon the side of Bryan. They are printed, not in an attempt to prove that everyone is deserting Mr. McKinley and will support Mr. Bryan, but to show that not all the people are on one side in this controversy. To judge from the matter appearing in some newspapers, one would be justified in thinking that all the good men in the United States are going to support Mr. McKinley; that Mr. Bryan will not have enough votes with which to light a fire. The truth is, people are nowadays to large extent disregarding party lines in their voting. And it is a fact which presages good to the commonwealth and to the nation. The independent voter is the safeguard of popular government. No party slogan compels him to shout. He cannot be "whipped" into line. He acts rationally, or as nearly so as his judgment dictates. Him the boss fears, and the patriot loves. In proportion as his tribe increases will better things come from this government of, by and for the people.

CAMPAIGN OF GOOD FEELING.

The campaign of 1900, thus far, has manifested no tendencies such as were shown in 1896 to engender ill-feeling and estrange friend from friend. Four years ago, foolish as it was, yet countless thousands felt a spirit of bitterness and hostility that left permanent results. It may be caused by apathy, but the change is pleasant to those who are broad enough to believe that the "other fellow" may be right, and that not all the political wisdom of the generation or all the civic excellence are bound up in one's own party or candidates or policies. It is welcome, indeed, to be regarded by a political opponent as something less than a traitor, and it induces a wholesome feeling to think of that opponent as something less bad than a horse-thief.

A CREAMEY FOR MILTON.

The people of Milton propose to establish a creamery. The proposition should meet with encouragement. It will add value to every cow and to every acre of fodder in that vicinity. N. A. Davis, cashier of the Milton bank, who is always public spirited and enterprising, is interested in the project, and will doubtless push plans to successful execution. It is by improvements such as this that a town is built up and made strong and independent. Already, the country surrounding Milton and Freewater has developed a great fruit industry. The addition of a creamery will still further strengthen it and bring better returns to the farmer and dairyman.

THE SMART SET.

To be smart and up to date is the feverish ambition of a large part of modern society. It is considered eminently correct to imitate the exaggerated manners of an alleged "smart set." Who created this smart set or framed for it the code of unwritten laws, no one knows. Its origin may be imaginary, but many crimes may be traced to the privileges of this social specter. The symptoms of its infatuation are unmistakable. It is recognized in taking liberties verging on fast ways—upon which society has laid a ban, in enlarging on the notion that the ten commandments are elastic, in going dangerously near the licensed conduct of those barred beyond the pale of morality. It is a false idea all around, and in live, wholesome society of the right sort of fashionable leaders the sooner a decided opinion is created against it the better.

If signs of the times are correct the wind has set in the right direction. In the lead comes a frank exposition of some of "The Errors of Society," by Rev. Braddin Hamilton in the Smart Set for November. Nothing could be more fitting than arraignment from this quarter. Power and force of example is in the hands of social leaders. What they condone, so do the lesser fry of social sycophants. At the outset the author of the talk on social failings notes the seriousness of an error or transgression committed by society, not alone for guilty parties, nor because it re[flects] on society itself, but owing to [its in]fluence on the millions who [are] ready to emulate society's m[anners] and manners. Often those [who are] resenting the statement are the most zealous imitators.

* * *

One does not need to loo[k far for] one of these "faults, m[istakes or] transgressions." But why [should they] be called "mistakes," whe[n it is a] bare fact that Folly has ta[ken the bit] in her teeth and runs th[e race with] wide open eyes. The st[ory is not of a] transgress, but those of caliber. Now, what was first a violation of social law has become common custom.

Rev. Braddin Hamilton calls attention to the custom among young married people of being seen in public with persons other than their life partners. Women are accompanied by other women's husbands, or "preferably young men or aged bachelors, and husbands with other men's wives, or young ladies or widows." A certain cult of married woman think it is "not the smart thing" to be seen on parade with a husband. And shocking it is to relate that their countenances betray whether they are dutifully bored by their legal partners or whether they are amused by the husband of some one else, or one of the "chronic beaux."

Women are accused of being the greatest transgressors in this Frenchy custom. A story is related of a Philadelphia man who told a friend that he was compelled to partially board two or three irresponsible men, "rounders," he called them, in order to keep his wife in a good humor. "I've got to do it," he remarked, "or stand up against continuous nagging." It is said this complaint voices what exists in many society homes. Reverse conditions, and what wife would endure young women guests invited for the avowed purpose of flattering her husband into amiability?

* * *

Such customs lead to conjugal discontent and divorce. How could it be otherwise? One of the blackest stains on American society is the present practice of divorce. Divorce laws were originally framed in most of the states to protect the poor and unfortunate, to relieve a woman of the support of a worthless, vicious husband, or a man of a drunken, faithless wife. Its benefits have been perverted. Home wrecking has become a trivial affair. Discontented parties seek divorce as a solution of their difficulties, perhaps as a means to gratify selfish ends. The one guilty of blame generally asks for divorce. That 95 per cent of divorce cases are prearranged is startling, that 90 per cent re-marry the very persons the gossips said they would is still more surprising.

Mr. Hamilton remarks that he is pleased to see that divorcees have not the same footing in society they had five years ago. "Their social standing is decidedly shaken, their treatment is doubtful and their movements are stimulated by audacity rather than by confidence." An excellent antidote for divorce prearranged and on trivial grounds in this country is "society's snub." The guilty ones do not go to church, and the censure of the press they mistake for popularity, but society's "deadly cut" and "frigid bow" inflict a fatal wound upon even the most brazen."

* * *

Married men are cautioned not to send flowers or pay flattering little attentions to the wives of their friends. Sad it is, but frailty thy name is woman, and only you belong to the weaker sex, for your head is turned, and your vanity forgets her wisdom, when men flatter. It may not be the good friend's intention to arouse discontent in the bosom of the wife of his neighbor, but it is better to avoid even the pretense of evil. Keep clear of mischief, be wise and discreet.

Gambling is another dangerous evil. Cards, and chiefly bridge whist, have brought it into the circle of the home. It has driven young men of high standing to be profligates and criminals. In certain private homes the chance caller knows when the card table is brought out that he will be "done up" by the "chronic beau" of the hostess.

Another reprehensible custom is the male "private secretary" for madam and her young lady daughters. He is out of place and an intrusion on home privacy. His intimate position gives him untold influence. Along with "chronic beaux," middle-aged bachelor friends, the male private secretary should be cast from the doors of good society maintaining a high moral standard.

There are ways of enjoying life without sinning against one's self and mankind. The greatest need of society at the present time is better leadership—leaders who for the pleasure of entertaining suggest amusements and have sufficient force of character to stand by their ideas of what is elevating and ennobling, and who will place on a loftier basis the whole body of our good society.

A PEEP

Into the future would sadden many a happy woman. The misery of marriage often results from ailments which maidenly modesty kept hidden. When doctors are at last consulted they frequently fail to help. They do not understand the root of the trouble. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription has cured in thousands of cases where doctors entirely failed.

"I had been a great sufferer from female weakness," writes Mrs. M. B. Wallace, of Muenster, Cook Co. Texas. "I tried four doctors and none did me any good. I suffered six years, but at last I found relief. I followed your advice, and took eight bottles of 'Favorite Prescription' and four of the 'Golden Medical Discovery.' I now feel like a new woman. I have gained eighteen pounds."
