THE OTHER SIDE.

Bicycle Riders Said to Be Violating the Law.

A subject is pretty small that hasn't nearly run over him. He was riding rapidly and had no light on his bicycle. Mr. Howard said he followed him for some distance, but could not catch him; and that if he had caught him he was going to march him back up town and deliver him to an officer. Mr. Howard stated further that he believed that many people were riding their bicycles upon the sidewalks, particularly after night, who had not taken out a license so to do.

Those who ride bicycles, and think enough of the privilege to pay for a license to ride their wheels upon the sidewalks, should assist the officers in every way to enforce the provisions of the ordinance. The ordinance is of great benefit to many, and it should be brought into disrepute because some evade payment of the license and ride upon the sidewalks to the imminent danger of peaceful pedestrians.

A Life and Death Fight.
Mr. W. A. Hines of Manchester, Ia., writing of his almost miraculous escape from death, says: "Exposure after measles induced serious lung trouble, which ended in consumption. I had frequent hemorrhages and coughed night and day. All my doctors said I must soon die. Then I began to use Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, which completely cured me. I would not be without it even if it cost $5 a bottle. Hundreds have used it on my recommendation and all say it never fails to cure throat, chest and lung troubles." Regular size 50c and $1. Trial bottles free at Tallman & Co.

AN UMBRELLA STORY.

"The Wicked Flee When No Man Pursues."
A story has come to light recently which, whether true or not, is a good one. It ought to be true, and will be told as though it were. A gentleman stepped into a Pendleton drugstore the other day, and set his umbrella down while he proceeded to make his purchases. That is, he set an umbrella down, which to all intents and purposes looked as though it did actually belong to him.

Another gentleman strolled along

BARNETT AND KIRK.

Two Athens Business Men on Their Way to Portland.

E. L. Barnett, cashier of the First National bank of Athens, and T. J. Kirk, representative-elect to the next house of the Oregon legislature, were in Pendleton for a few hours Tuesday evening and left later for Portland for a week's stay. Mr. Kirk was going down to look around a little politically and Mr. Barnett is on his annual trip to the metropolis.

Mr. Barnett was an interesting talker at the Hotel Pendleton for an hour in the evening, and from him it was learned that Athens is enjoying a fair share of prosperity at present. Farmers are holding onto their wheat so tenaciously that only about one-fourth of the amount raised in that vicinity has been sold as yet, and nearly all that has been sold was disposed of six or eight weeks ago at from four to five cents per bushel more than can be now obtained. At Athens is the largest warehouse in the county, and it is stacked full of wheat. Several other large warehouses are in like condition. More hay was grown on the foothills east of Athens this year, perhaps, than in any other in the history of the county, and a big price has been obtained for it. Much of this hay was shipped to Wallula, there to be re-baled for the use of government horses at different military posts.

Hobo Finds a Letter.

While A. M. Gillis, the contractor, was at work recently on a warehouse at Athens, a hobo stepped up and asked him if his name was Gillis. He acknowledged that it was. The hobo produced a letter and asked if it belonged to him. Mr. Gillis looked at the superscription and saw that the letter did belong to him, thanked the hobo and stuck the letter in his pocket. The hobo told him there might be something valuable in the letter and advised him to open it and see. Mr. Gillis was busy, however, and went up to the roof of the warehouse and resumed work. Later he had a little leisure and opened the letter. He drew forth a check in his favor for $4000. He came down off the roof in a hurry and made a search for the stranger hobo, but slip him a ten dollar piece, but could not find him. Mr. Gillis' boy had gotten the mail from the postoffice, had then gone after the cows down on the bottom land south of town, and had lost the letter. The hobo while preparing a fragrant repast of stew, had found it and returned it to its owner. The hobo ever learns that that letter contained he will devote a few minutes daily ever after to kicking himself.

SWITCHMAN DIED FROM INJURIES.

Stumbled and Fell Under the Wheels While Train Was Switching.

James Burns, night switchman in the railroad yards at Huntington, was fatally injured by being run over by three cars Saturday night and died Sunday morning. The switch crew was making a flying switch and Burns was standing on the cars, ready to be switched. When they were ready to make the uncoupling, Burns gave the correct signal to the engineer and was descending, when he made a misstep and was hurled headlong to the track. The following were the last words he uttered: "Oh, my God, what will my dear old mother say when she will see me in this state. I was young and well when last she saw me. My God, my God."

The deceased was a man of about 40 years of age, was a native of New York and his home is in Butte. He was a comparative stranger in Huntington, having been there only a few days. He was horribly mangled, both his left leg and arm being crushed. About the only thing the physicians could do for the unfortunate man was to administer an anesthetic to relieve his suffering.

RULE SENSE.

An Eddyville Animal Equals the Action of Ferringer's "Dan."

A few days ago the East Oregonian published an item with reference to George E. Ferringer's well known "Dan," which caused comment. James Crawford now comes to the front with a story that equals it, and as he put it, "it is true, too." Mr. Crawford has a nephew named C. C. McBride, who resides at Eddyville, Oregon. Mr. McBride has a mule which resides at the same place. Sometime ago the mule took sick without any person or any animal knowing about it but itself. It went to the kitchen window and rubbed its nose against the pane. The mule was driven away the first and second time, but insisted on coming back until it got its desired proper medical treatment. Having received its medicine it went away about its business and got well.

STERILIZED BARBER SHOP.

A Famous Shop in the Carrollton Hotel, Baltimore, Maryland.

The barber shop in the Carrollton hotel, Baltimore, sterilizes everything it uses in the shop. The sterilizing is done by heat. The towels, the razor, the straps, the soap, the combs and brushes are sterilized before being used on a customer. Where there is no sterilization, have the barber use Newbro's Herpicide. It kills the dandruff germ, and it is an antiseptic for the scalp, and for the face after shaving. All leading barbers everywhere appreciate these potent uses of Herpicide and they use it. "Destroy the cause, you remove the effect."

ARRESTED FOR LIBEL.

The Cassidy-Balliet War Continues at Baker City.

Henry F. Cassidy, who has been publishing the Baker City Herald for several months, and who exposed the manipulations of a mining man named Letson Balliet, was arrested at Baker City Saturday on two charges of criminal libel, one growing out of an article appearing in the Herald under Cassidy's management, and the other for the circulation of a handbill on Saturday, attacking the plaintiff over his, Cassidy's, signature. Cassidy was arraigned before a justice and put under $250 bonds on each charge. J. H. Parker and William Polman furnished the bonds. The case will come before the circuit court at Baker, which convenes next week. Cassidy spent several weeks in Pendleton in November and December of 1899.

Three bucks and two boys were lodged in jail while the women and children pitched their camp near town and awaited results. The Indians are Lapwai, and their names are James Toyas, John Lawyer, Louis

James, Alex James and Matthias Little Boat. The trial was begun on Saturday and concluded on Monday with the result that John Lawyer, who admitted that he killed two deer on November 6, was found guilty by the jury and sentenced to pay a fine of $100. The Indians felt pretty bad that they were the only ones arrested while probably they did not get as many deer as many other hunting parties that have been swarming all over the country the past two months. They told very freely at the number killed by other parties who had just left.

As to Prescriptions
when physicians recommend you, what have they compounded by us, what does that mean? Simply the certainty on their part that you will get exactly what is prescribed—the right quantity and the right quality, which is even more important.
