WEEKLY MARKET REVIEW.

Price of Wheat is a Shade Better Than a Week Ago.

Pendleton, Feb. 21.—The price of wheat is a shade better than a week ago. Local millers are paying 45c for No. 1 redchaff and club delivered at the mill and 42c for club delivered at outside warehouses. W. S. Byers purchased about 20,000 bushels on Wednesday but paid 44 cents per bushel or an outside lot in order to get it exporters having offered 43c for the same lot.

The Byers mill is making a run on yellow corn meal today. On Wednesday it ground some rye. The run of the mill for six days on wheat, commencing Monday morning, February 11, and closing Sunday morning, February 17, is stacked up in the warehouse awaiting shipment. It is contracted for in advance. There are about 20,000 sacks in the pile. It makes a pile 60x30x8 feet.

Speaking of the corn now being ground Mr. Byers stated that it was making a good meal as the eastern corn. It was grown between Adams and Athena and is proof conclusive that corn can be grown to advantage in this region. It cost Mr. Byers nearly 50 cents per bushel, or almost one cent per pound.

Rub Her Neck.

Monday a La Grande girl took a header from a bicycle and was jarred into unconsciousness, says the Chronicle. Bystanders tried in vain to revive her, until suddenly a benevolent-looking, kindly old gentleman stepped up and said: "Rub her neck." At this the girl opened her eyes, and brushing back her tears and repressing a cry of anguish, she screamed: "Rubberneck yourself, you old fool," and she was so mad she couldn't cry.

THE BUYING OF SHEEP.

THEY WILL BE PURCHASED IN THE FALL IN FUTURE.

No Longer Practical to Buy Them in the Spring and Trail Them East.

"Oregon sheep intended for Eastern markets will hereafter be purchased in the fall, instead of in the spring," according to I. A. Carson, a Wyoming buyer, now in Portland, says the Oregonian.

"The reason of this," he continued, "is because starting sheep across Idaho and Wyoming is no longer practicable. We used to take the sheep just as soon as they were shorn, and move them in bands of 500 or 2000 each, crossing Snake river by ferry-boat and permitting them to graze at their leisure, making from five to eight miles per day on their journey eastward. The flocks would spread out all over the side of a country, clearing the grass out for a width of half a mile as they went, and by the time they reached their destination on the feeding grounds of Nebraska, winter would be closing in, and the animals would be in good condition."

"But the trails have all been settled up of late by stockmen and farmers, who want to use the grass themselves, and so they will not permit traveling sheep to cross their lands. The water, in places, in fact, are now all claimed by somebody, and the sheep-drover is charged at least a cent a head for the privilege of watering his bands in the Snake river valley or in the mountains of Wyoming. A cent a head is not much, but it amounts to $70 a day for a band of 7000."

"Besides this, the states of Idaho and Wyoming have each placed an embargo on traveling sheep, guaranteeing the bands for long periods and taxing them besides, in order to prevent sheepraisers of Oregon and Utah from using the public domain for temporary pasture. These laws were enacted ostensibly for sanitary purposes, but really at the behest of the resident sheepmen, who want the grass for themselves. Whatever may be the reason, however, Oregon sheep can no longer be driven across their territory, and so 'trailing' is done for."

"Western men will hereafter buy Oregon sheep late in the fall, after those who raised the animals have emigrated them, and the stock will be shipped in double-deck cars, direct to the feeding grounds, where they will be fed on corn and alfalfa hay until fit for the Chicago markets."

"Bob Foster, of Colorado, was the last man to trail sheep eastward. Last year he took 7000 from Eastern Oregon as far as Soda Springs, Idaho, but was there compelled to load them on stock cars and freight them to Denver. He had a hard time on the route, as every man, woman and child was up in arms the moment his sheep were in sight. The sheep were in very poor order when they reached Soda Springs, and Foster declared he would never attempt to trail sheep across the country again."

"My own experience last year cured me of the trailing habit. In company with D. R. Cassidy, I bought 9000 head in Eastern Oregon for the feeding grounds, and we reached the edge of the state beyond Baker City, but could go no further, and so hung up in the mountains there for the summer. We afterwards sold the stock to parties who fattened them on best pulp in the Grand Ronde valley, for coast consumption."

Mr. Carson declares he will not look for any sheep this spring, but will hire himself to the coast, near Seaside, for the summer, and put in the time digging claims while Oregon sheepmen are fattening the stock on the blossoms in the Cascade forest reserve or among the mining claims of the Blue mountains.

THE ATHENA NEIGHBORHOOD.

Death of John Vaughan, a Well Known Citizen; Interest in City Election.

Athens, Feb. 20.—John Vaughan, an old pioneer resident of Athens, died at his home in this city Wednesday morning, after a short illness, with quick consumption. Mr. Vaughan was born near Jacksonville, Cass county, Illinois, on January 2, 1844. He moved west with his family in 1850 and located at Athens, at which place he made his home until 1890, when he took up his residence at Athena. He leaves a wife and five children, viz., Celia, Cora and Jessie Vaughan, of Athens; Mrs. David Russell, of Goussan; and James Vaughan, of Humboldt, Neb. The funeral will take place at 11 o'clock, Thursday morning. Thus passes to the great majority another of Athens's old and much respected citizens.

Alfonso Rey, who had the misfortune of breaking his leg about three weeks ago, is rapidly recovering from the effects of his injury, and will be able to be around again in a few days.

James Britten, who has been a victim of a gripe, is again able to be on the streets.

Mrs. W. P. Willaby, who has been seriously ill for the past two weeks, is reported by the attending physician as on the road to rapid recovery. The other members of the family, three in number, who have been sick, are also recovering.

J. W. Froome, who four years ago had gangrene settle in his foot, and who has since then been a constant sufferer, will be taken to the Walla Walla hospital, Friday, when his foot will be amputated. His physician having decided that the removal of the foot would be necessary to stop the disease.

David Love, who left here last week in company with Clayton Luna for Condon, with a view of going into business there, returned home Wednesday. He was pleased with his prospects at that thriving little city and expects to return there in a few days to locate.

The city election pot is hot and will soon be boiling. There was a full ticket placed in the field, but since the convention there have been a number of candidates nominated by petition. The election takes place Tuesday, March 5. The race between W. J. Wilkinson, Arthur H. Curtis, for mayor, and J. W. Smith and Raymond Lloyd, for recordership, is warm, and the candidates are contesting every inch of ground with all the tact of true politicians.

UNCLE TOM'S CABIN.

Old as the Hills it Continues to Please and Interest Thousands.

Although the lessons to be taught by Harriet Beecher Stowe's novel of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" have long since been well learned by blood and bullet, the play continues to delight and interest thousands. The Fraser opera house was crowded last evening. Standing room only was to be had by the time the curtain raised. Incidentally, it was a new curtain, and hung properly. The familiar characters were present, with the old lines and some new, some old gags, to which the audience bowed with the reverence due to old age. The characters have not changed a great deal, and interest was maintained throughout. A good orchestra, added to the pleasure of the occasion. The company is a strong one, and some good singing and a number of specialties added to the enjoyment. "Uncle Tom's Cabin" holds its own with the modern plays and is a house filler.

PECULIAR ACCIDENT ON THE N. P.

An American Eagle Run Down Near Park River, Idaho.

Engineer James J. Bigger of the Northern Pacific, in making the run from Hope, Idaho, to Stockton on engine No. 552 attached to the through freight, ran down a bald eagle, the emblem of American liberty, wounding the glorious bird so seriously that it had to be killed, says the Spokesman-Tribune. The accident occurred shortly after daybreak near the Park river bridge, but just how will never be known, as the bird was not discovered until the train stopped at Odia, when it was found fast between the bars of the pilot of the locomotive.

One of its wings was broken and while yet very much alive, it had lost all its much vaunted ambition to soar beyond the mountain tops. The bird was dispatched and the body thrown upon the tender and brought to the roundhouse in Spokane, where the remains were viewed with curiosity by scores of the shop hands and others. The bird measured six feet from tip to tip of its wings and was a magnificent specimen of its kind.

ENGLISH CHARLEY'S LIFE.

Ran Away From Home Rather Than Marry His Rich Cousin.

It has been proved conclusively that you can't tell by looking at a road how far it can jump. Neither can you tell by looking at a man what an eventful history he has had. It takes all kinds of people to make a city. Pendleton has all kinds, and some left over. Of one of these characters it is desired to speak. "English Charlie" has been a resident of Pendleton for years, and many of his acquaintances do not even know his real name is Charles Hammond. He is now the proprietor of the pale blue bootblack stand in front of Peto Smith's place, and says he is making an honest living and is happy.

Disobeyed His Father.

He was a resident of England up to the year 1871, when he disobeyed his father's wish, expressed in his will, that he marry his cousin and keep the fortune in the family. His father was a carpet manufacturer and died wealthy. The money cut little figure with Charles, and the girl none at all. He was about 20 years old then, so left home penniless. First he went to New Zealand and engaged in a pastoral life herding sheep. During the gold excitement he went to Melbourne, Australia, and from there went to the gold diggings, packing his blankets 700 miles. The mining mania held possession of him and he went to South Africa to the mines, but neither there or in Australia did he strike it rich. His next business was running a sugar plantation on the Sandwich islands, having been shipwrecked there while on his way to California. He did not tarry long in San Francisco, but trudged to Portland, carrying his blankets with him. He came on to Pendleton and settled down for life. Having knocked around the world he was fortunate in finding such a city as Pendleton in which to settle down and enjoy himself for the rest of his days.
