cold water. The raw silk is too fine and delicate for textile manipulation, and has to be doubled and twisted to give it the necessary body and strength. To this end the skeins of raw silk are placed on light wheels, known as "shifts," from which the silk is wound onto spools; then two spools of silk are run together and doubled and afterward twisted, some of the twisting machines, however, performing the doubling and twisting in one operation. The twisted silk is then wound onto rectangular frames, known as creels or reels, and at the same time is measured off into lengths of from 10,000 to 15,000 yards, the silk now being once more in the form of skeins. It is then taken from the creels and rolled up into hanks, ready for dyeing. After the silk has been dyed it is returned to skeins, which are slipped over a set of what are known as "soft silk" winders, from which it is wound onto spools once more. It is then taken to the warping department, where the spools are placed upon tables which may carry from 110 up to as many as 100 spools. In the hand-warping machines there will be from 100 to 120 spools on a table, while the power-warping machines will carry from 300 to 600 spools. The operator gathers up the ends of silk on each spool and turns the threads into the frame in the mill, the threads in this case being wound parallel. From 100 to 1000 threads are run off on warping spools, which are technically known as "beams"—round cylinders of wood or iron which are 6 or 7 inches in diameter, and of a width which varies from 4 inches to 30 inches, according to the character of the fabric of which the thread is to form the warp.

The beams are then carried to the looms, where the threads are first led through a "harness," and then passed through a steel "reed" or comb, there being from two to fourteen threads in one "dent," according to the quality of the goods. The harness consists of a series of top and bottom plates known as "dials," each pair of which is connected by a number of parallel vertical threads at the center of each of which is a small brass eyelet through which the silk threads are passed. Several of these sets are arranged vertically behind each other in the loom, and each harness with its set of threads is raised in turn between each passage of the shuttle through the warp. Each harness thus serves to lift a different set of threads in the passage of the shuttle; and it is by the proper adjustment of the vertical motions of the harness to the strokes of the shuttle that the nature of the weave of the goods is determined. The woven fabric is then taken to the packing room, where all knots, dirt, and stains are removed.

The goods are now taken to the finishing department, where it is put through a variety of operations which would necessitate another article to adequately describe them. Among other operations is that of singeing, to take off any rough nap that may be left on the goods after singeing or singeing with a preparation of wax and gelatine, a process which is not unlike that of starching in laundry work. The final gloss or finish is secured by calendaring, in which the fabric is run between a series of superimposed steel rolls, where it is ironed out and the fine glossy finish is secured. The goods are then either folded or wrapped on blocks ready for the market.—Scientific American.

Is your Hair worth One Dollar?

NEWBOLD'S HERPIDIOL

It is the only preparation on the market that really will stop it, for it is the only one that kills the mites at work on the hair root, thus destroying the cause and consequently removing the effect.

One trial will convince you, the same as it has thousands of others.

When I bought that bottle of Newbold's Herpidiol, I thought it would be a waste of money, but I was wrong. It has done for me what no other preparation could. My hair is growing rapidly. Respectfully, A. C. SHAW & CO.

COLD IN THE HEAD

BAD COLDS

Quinine is ten years behind. Odds do not now have to be endured. MENDEL'S DYNAMIC TABLETS (called dynamic from their energy) crowd weeks' ordinary treatment into twelve hours and abort the worst colds over night.

"It was the worst case of grip I ever had. A half dozen friends had cure cures. Still it hung on. Head of DYNAMIC TABLETS. To my amazement they stopped both cold and cough the first night. I endorse and recommend them to the people." DAVID L. HENLEY, ex-Member Congress and Attorney, 101 Sansome street, San Francisco, Aug. 7, 1900.

"After odds have always been serious things to me. They are hard and stay for months. But the last was stopped suddenly by MENDEL'S DYNAMIC TABLETS. Both cough and cold disappeared in couple of days. Subbing, it does this for me." MRS. EMMA L. HOLLIN, 14 More St., San Francisco, Aug. 6, 1900.
