He has poses, as part of this constitution, made a record so unusual for a volunteer soldier that the regular army officers are jealous, and, as the dispatches said on Friday, "dub his enterprise as a mere scouting expedition."

To the man who betrayed his chief will always attach the stigma of treachery. His will be the fate of Benwhose cause he espoused while acting the recopie have been trying to secure honor and his compatriots. History ways has for the man who barters his flag for the coin of its foe.

Even those who are warmest in support or the administration's policy in the Philippines will loathe the Tagal traitor. They will hate the man who then basely betray him who had given the trust, Ignominy, contempt, despising, scorn, these are deserved by the man who is faithless to a sacred confidence. This agent is in much the same position as would have been one who, trusted by the confederate president in the civil war period, had betrayed his superior into the hands of the union commanding general.

Let Pendleton invite the president he could visit every small town along the route he will travel, but the invitation should be sent, nevertheless, and chance might favor us. All people like to see a real live president, and few ever have the opportunity. The great office he fills makes him everyone's chief executive, and all patriotic citizens should delight to do him honor.

The sprinkling of streets in the residence portion of Pendleton-let it be agitated and finally accomplished. It is feasible and desirable. Pendleton has three or four streets running east and west, and, by reason of the prevailing wind direction, the sprinkling of these streets will almost completely settle the dust proposition in the main part of town.

Not much is heard during these days of the proposed endowment for the Pendleton academy. It would pay the citizens to keep this matter in mind, and take steps to accomplish so desirable an end.

The above mentioned provision makes it possible for the states to take the initiative in securing an amendnent to the constitution and is another illustration of the foresight of the edict Arnold, who, going to England early statesmen. For nearly ten years the traitor to his country, met with an amendment providing for the election of senators by a direct vote of the contuniely and scorn. SPAIN'S LOST GLORY.

While the sale of the last of Spain's possessions in Asiatic waters was agreed upon several months ago, the sctual transfer at Washington marks the obliteration from two continents of what was once the leading land owner of all nations.

Spain was the pioneer maritime do nothing to get rid of it, nation in the Pacific, as all American children are taught. In the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries she was at the America lumbus; in 1512 the tanding of Ponce de Leon in Florida; in 1513 tories was encouraged and a door of adventurers pressed into the interior and History has no more striking example of injustice from such a combination But there is romance connected with the dominion of Spain that gives a mournful aspect to the passing of its flag from the islands of the America is rich in legends and traditions of the first conquerors: the old world has fond recollections of the palmy days of the haughty don and his followers. There attaches to the erumbling nation the same sentiment that is excited by a crumbling ruin of man's habitation. One forgets the ernelty and greed of the Spaniard in the contemplation of his former grandeur. And the wreck of the once proud nation should warn the climters in our own country that perpetuation of a people is achieved by honesty with other peoples, by morality at hone and abroad. -Spokesman-Review.
