BREAKERS FOR THE STEEL TRUST.

A press dispatch from St. Paul gives the information that the attorney-general of Minnesota has been directed by a senate resolution to inquire into the proposed consolidation of the Duluth & Iron Range and Duluth, Mesaba & Northern railways, with a view to determining whether or not it is in conflict with the laws of the state. In the event the attorney-general returns findings such as warrant action, proceedings will be instituted to prevent the consolidation.

This is practically the only movement that has been taken for some time to interfere with the formation of trusts in the United States. It is to be hoped that Minnesota's attorney-general will pursue investigation in a spirit of really endeavoring to ascertain whether the combining of the two state roads is in contravention of the laws that forbid such a combination, for, if this be, it may furnish opportunity to check the trust tendencies, by furnishing a basis for action in other states.

These two roads have for many years operated between Duluth and Two Harbors and the iron mines north from the two cities. The Duluth & Iron Range is the older, having been in existence for something like 20 years. The Mesaba road was built in 1892. The latter road was acquired by John D. Rockefeller from the Merritt interests. The United States steel corporation, which is the "billion-dollar trust," made arrangements for the purchase of the roads and making them into one system. These roads carry every ton of iron ore from the Northern Minnesota mines to the shores of Lake Superior, whence it is transported by water to the Eastern furnaces.

If the trust obtain control of the roads, having already control of the mines and the lake boats, it will absolutely own the entire iron industry of Minnesota, now the most extensive in the United States.

By reason of the appointment of P. C. Knox, who was under a $50,000 salary with the steel companies now forming the trust, to the federal attorney-generalship, all hopes of enforcement of national anti-trust laws are blasted. Mr. Knox will not proceed against the trust that has so fully fed him in the past. At least, one is justified in deducing that from the logic of the situation.

So that the movement in Minnesota will be important. It will be necessary, with Mr. Knox in the attorney-general's office, to resort to the next best thing, the handling of trusts in the courts of the several states. Thoughtful men who fear the growing power of the vast aggregations of capital will watch the Minnesota case with deep interest.

A CREAMERY FOR PENDLETON.

According to the state dairy and food commissioner, J. W. Bailey, no more than $3000 need be secured in order to the building of a creamery here. He asserts that a larger amount at the beginning is superfluous. This sum could be gotten in hand, if the right persons would take hold of the enterprise and, after forming intelligent plans, proceed to enlist financial support.

As one reads the many newspapers of Oregon and Washington coming to the exchange table, he is impressed with the growth of the creamery industry during recent years. Wherever milk cows can be kept creameries are being built, and instances of failure are surprisingly few. It is safe to assert that in no other industry has there been so general success. Farmers, once accustomed to selling the milk or cream, and obviating the troublesome work of caring for it and making butter, never desire to return to the old method. The creamery will do much to make farm life more attractive.

It is especially a boon to the women. Under the creamery plan, the farmer's wife has absolutely nothing to do with the handling of milk and cream, the men performing all of the work, and thus lightening what are frequently great and always wearying burdens of the women on the farm.

This subject warrants close investigation by the farmers Pendleton and the business men of the town. The East Oregonian will encourage the enterprise in every manner within its power.

THE PARDONING POWER.

Says the Portland Oregonian: In a recently published letter Governor Geer seeks to justify his pardon of Edwin L. Mims upon the ground that the jury rendered a verdict of guilty of manslaughter upon an agreement to recommend to the court for a minimum sentence, which was one year, that the judge ignored their recommendation and gave Mims five years; that the jury said that if they had supposed the judge would ignore the request they would have never agreed to a verdict of guilty. There is no force in this plea, for no jury has a legal right under their oath to give any man a full acquittal fearing that the court would not be as merciful as the jury would be if they were the court. The law wisely binds the jury by oath to render a verdict in accordance with the evidence, and wisely reserves to the judge the right to determine whether mercy should be extended to the guilty and what measure of mercy, which may extend to a suspension of sentence, but the jury has only to determine the guilt of the accused as a question of fact.

They may acquit if insanity to the point of irresponsibility is established; they may find the prisoner guilty with a recommendation to mercy, but it belongs to the court to approve or reject a recommendation of mercy, and to fix the measure of mercy if the court decides to grant the jury's prayer. It is not a juror's business to find verdicts which spell mercy illegally extended. It is his sole business to find verdicts according to the evidence and to recommend mercy. He must leave to the judge the question of mercy and its measure. He is bound as an oath-keeping juror to leave the question of mercy, where the law wisely leaves it, with the court. To acquit a guilty man because the jury thinks the judge may not be merciful enough is not the measure of mercy, and the law, by restricting the jury to a recommendation of mercy, shows that its clear intention is to keep the jury down to the question of fact as to the guilt of the accused, leaving the question of mercy and its degree entirely to the discretion of the court.

A jury ought to understand that a juror's oath is broken when a clearly guilty man is acquitted. So in this Mims case it was not the jury's business to fix the sentence of the court. Their responsibility ended with conviction and recommendation to mercy. They knew perfectly well that while the judge may approve the jury's recommendation to mercy, he is not under the slightest legal or moral obligation to do so. In this particular case the judge did consider favorably the jury's recommendation to mercy, for he gave the convict only five years when he otherwise would have given him fifteen. What right had the jury to suppose that their recommendations to mercy would fix the term of sentence? Surely not from the judge or the prosecuting attorney. For these reasons we deem the plea of the jury for a pardon to Mims absolutely weak and worthless; an ex-post facto excuse for stiffening their verdict by indorsing an application for pardon.

The plea that Mims' continued incarceration was a source of private sorrow to worthy people who were connected with him by marriage is worthless, because, as Governor Geer confesses, on that plea 50 per cent of the prisoners could be liberated tomorrow. The truth is that when pardons are issued on the plea of personal sympathy for the prisoner's decent family, or on the plea that unless the prisoner is released he will die in jail, punishment is robbed of its strongest terrors. The reflection that it is painful to be separated from wife and children; that a penitentiary is a very disagreeable place to be sick and a disgraceful place to die, restrains many a man of criminal impulses from committing crime. A penitentiary should be made healthful and the food should be sufficient and wholesome, but beyond this a penitentiary should be made so utterly austere and repulsive that no man would ever leave it without an utter disgust and dread of a return to its gloomy walls. The only just rule in our judgment should be for the governor never to issue a pardon, no matter who signed the petition, unless it could be shown with legal conclusiveness that the verdict was unjust and contrary to evidence. The desire, the willingness, the anxiety of a number of persons, be they ever so influential, should never be respected. The state should right any wrong wrought by clear failure of justice in the trial, but otherwise there should be no mercy beyond commutation for good conduct.

CATARRH

Catarrh has become such a common disease that a person rarely free from this disagreeable complaint is seldom met with. It is customary to speak of Catarrh as nothing more serious than a bad cold, a simple inflammation of the nose and throat. It is, in fact, a complicated and very dangerous disease; if not at first, it very soon becomes so.

The blood is quickly contaminated by the foul secretions, and the poison through the general circulation is carried to all parts of the system. Salives, washes and sprays are unsatisfactory and disappointing, because they do not reach the seat of the trouble. S. S. does. It cleanses the blood of the poison and eliminates from the system all catarrhal secretions, and thus cures thoroughly and permanently the worst cases.

Dr. P. H. McAllister, of Harrodsburg, Ky., writes: "Having been a terrible sufferer from Catarrh, and being unable to find relief, I was induced to try S. S. I am glad to say that I feel it my duty to state that S. S. is a true believer in the efficacy of S. S. I can honestly and conscientiously recommend it to any one suffering from Catarrh, and I have recommended it to many, and am happy to say that those whom I have induced to use it can bear me out in the statement that it will cure any case of Catarrh if taken according to directions."

SSS is the only purely vegetable blood purifier known, and the greatest of all blood medicines and tonics.

If you have Catarrh don't wait until it becomes deep-seated and chronic, but begin at once the use of S. S., and send for our book on blood and skin diseases and write our physicians about your case.
