endleton is Free From the Disease for the First Time in Six

Quarantine has been raised at the isted in Pendleton, and the city is now free from the disease for the first time in six months. During that time it is estimated that 150 people had the smallpox, but one of which resulted porter of Privett's barber shop. About 10 per cent of the cases were severe and the patients were noticeably marked, but not a half dozen of all the cases reported were so severe that they were considered in danger of losing their lives. Many of the cases were some so light that the patients took it as a yacation from work or the name of the cases were that they have been stabbed in a brawl. The Walla Walla Union received in ormation through railway soucres that McDaniels, after having been refused admission to the pesthouse there, walked to Pendleton, avoiding persons as much as possible in order that he might not communicate the disease to anyone, and at night slept in haystacks along the road. The same paper says: "When it was ascertained by Pendleton authorities that the man was in that city no question as to who should take care of him was raised but he was at once placed in quarantine and will be provided for until he has fully recovered from the effects of the disease to which he is a victim." That statement would have been true had McDaniels come here. The Pendleton authorities turned no stranger away if suffering with smallpox. That the Waila Walla authorities should have done so is a matter that needs an explanation. It would seem that self preservation as well as humanity would have been sufficient to cause them to quarantine any person, al-though a stranger, and give him the medical attention and care due one in
