WILL BE AGAINST TARIFF

Republican Congressman Babcock to Insist on Revision.

Chicago, April 27.—A Record-Herald Washington dispatch says: "Congress, as the representative body of the people, will fall far short of its duty if it permits a tariff to remain on certain articles when such a duty is not needed for protection to home industries along the lines advocated by the republican party," said Representative Babcock of Wisconsin, who returned to Washington from the West today. Mr. Babcock says he has looked carefully into the industrial situation in the middle West, as well as in the East, and is more than ever convinced that his intended bill to wipe out the tariff duty on manufactured steel and iron products is not only a just but a necessary step at this time.

"It is not material," he said, "whether it is an individual or combination of individuals that has gained control of any single product, so that they can fix any price they see fit and make the consumers pay that price. When an article can be manufactured in this country cheaper than it can be made anywhere else that industry needs protection no longer. If the republican party fails to meet the new conditions its whole theory of protection falls to the ground.

"There is a difference, for instance between steel and sugar. Sugar still demands protection to develop the beet-growing industries of the West and for the cane growers of the South. Furthermore, sugar furnishes more revenue than any other article on the tariff schedule. Sugar should continue to receive protection under the republican policy. Steel and iron manufacturers produce no revenue to speak of.

"The Russian recalled an Affront to English Ambassador Was the Cause.

Paris, April 27.—A lively dispute is going on in the party press concerning the real reason for the sudden recall to St. Petersburg of Colonel Muraviev, military attaché to the Russian embassy here. The cabinet organs say that the attaché leaves because he has received promotion in the army. The opposition papers declare that the colonel attacked General Andre, minister of war, in letters to the Russian government, and that the French cabinet obtained his recall.

In connection with the colonel's removal from Paris 27.—A sensational story is afloat to the effect that at a large diplomatic reception he was guilty of an indiscretion that would have been offensive in a layman, but in the case of a diplomat was a serious breach of etiquette as well as a violation of the code of good society. Sir Edmund Monson, the British ambassador, was present at this function, and in the presence of that official Colonel Muraviev, referring to the Boer war, is said to have spat on the floor, saying, "That is the way I would like to serve England." Sir Edmund resented this public affront and the colonel's recall ensued.

ENGLAND IS ALARMED NOW.

For Her Financial Supremacy Since U. S. began loaning Her.

London, April 27.—The aggressive eagerness of the United States to absorb as much as possible of the new issue of British consols is causing a great stir in English financial circles. Not only the brokers but the editorial writers of all classes are having a go at the matter. Some of these welcome the invasion of the yankees as supplying a healthful financial and economic stimulus, while others, bemoan what they profess to believe the irremediable decline of England's monetary supremacy.

Just how much of the new war loan of $20,000,000 sterling (£300,000,000) will go to the United States remains to be seen. J. Pierpont Morgan and his associates have already taken care of $50,000,000 of the issue and will probably stop with that amount. They think that all the other American bidders combined will scarcely get more than $5,000,000.

Attacked by a Vicious Stallion.

Ed Bartholomew, while riding in the pasture near the mouth of Willow creek last Monday, was viciously attacked by a big stallion, who came tearing down toward him like a cyclone, says the Heppner Times. Before Ed could get away the vicious beast rushed up and bit him on the leg, at the same time pulling him off the gelding he was riding, and for a few seconds it looked like the Times would have to write another obituary. However, Ed, in some manner overpowered his adversary and soon made his escape, but he will carry a very sore leg for many days.
