DAVE HILL A FACTOR.

The man who fails to keep track of David Bennett Hill will not be much States is due to the fact that the counof a prophet of political conditions try could care for itself in so far as when the ante-convention discussion is in progress in 1904. Mr. Hill was the rival of Mr. Bryan for the position of prime popularity at the Kansas City has been rendered the more difficult convention in 1900. His ovation was second only to that of Mr. Bryan. His strength throughout the country cannot be questioned.

Mr. Hill occupies a position of peculiar power just at this time. The an- until the bare necessities will not tagonism of the anti-Bryan forces was apparent in the last campaign. It prevented Bryan's election. It came near dictating the convention, regardless of the numerical showing made by the radical wing of the party. It is the more potent when proportion of numbers is taken in account, for the reason that it contains more finished and scientific politicians than the other

Dave Hill is one of the strongest of the common man. Her's is a policy of Advice of a the anti-Bryanites. He is a brave isolation, not one of friendly affiliafighter. He has not concealed his tion with other countries. opinions nor acted an underhanded course. He told the world he did not want Bryan and showed an apparent sincerity that captures the fancy of all men who admire a gallant man who "talks right out in meeting."

"talks right out in meeting."

It looks now as though Mr. Hill will not be able to win the nomination.

Nevertheless, at Kansas City on July 5 and 6, it looked like Dave Hill was almost sure to come next in the procession if Mr. Bryan suffered his second defeat.

The sull be mall to hear in mind, that the sure of the sound of the sure of the thousands of workingmen to whom he has "given employment at good wages" have been able to keep pace with him in the million dollar race? asks Dr. W. His inessays to add together the elements that make up the sum total of influence in the democratic party.

PLEASE CUT OUT POLITICS.

Why cannot President McKinley leave politics out of his speeches during the western tour? is a question that may be asked with pertinency. As the president, he is being received enthusiastically wherever he goes. People are delighting to do him honor. But they want not any politics from him while he is their guest. They will ducer. Admit for the moment that he listen to all sorts of glorification of the earns every cent he gets, that he works country. They will listen to rounded periods of eloquence as he speaks of should be sick for two months or the nation's vast resources and the should go to Europe for six months, or wondrous power she wields in the besent to an aslyum for the insane, their wages would stop. It will be an excellent investment it the needed funds be secured here to make the improvements that are called for by the management and that are warranted by the school's possibilities. The time has come when something must be done to provide better equipment and buildings. The progress already made has been largely based on the partial promise of these improvements in the nearer future. The principal and the instructors have accomplished as much as can be accomplished under the present status. Unless the institumove forward, it must from this time on move backward. And it is imperative that matters be taken hold of in a vigorous manner at once. Opportunity will not always wait for the proper action on the part of the school's supporters.
