man who at one time was foremost in the development of Umatilla county and in the building up of Pendleton. In his day and generation, Mr. Frazer was conspicuous for his energy, but of recent years, owing to the feebleness of old age, he was content to allow the younger ones to carry forward the work which he had commenced in the heyday of his business successes. Widely known and highly respected, the death of Mr. Frazer will be received with sorrow. The event was not unexpected, however, as for months he had been gradually weakening, and death came to him as gently as though he had but fallen to sleep.

A Biographical Sketch.

Four years of mining life proved hazardous. Indeed, the list of casual-ties to which Mr. Frazer was subject ties to which Mr. Frazer was subject suggest some sort of protecting agency that does not guard everyone. Once he had been setting a blast in a deep mine. Hastening up the shaft to be out of the way, the windlass crank broke, dropping him to take the explosion, which he was trying to prevent. He was not hurt. Another time he was buried 54 feet (?) deep under a landslide at Makelumne hill, but was dug out uninjured. At Georgetown, while he was in the 25 foot shaft, the reservoir gave way, filling to be way filling to be way. It indicates the second that a state of the Latest News From That Tewn.

In 1866, after settling up his affairs in California, he came to the Willam-ette valley and bought large bands of sheep, which he drove to the immense ranges of Birch creek in the southern of Umatilla county. Here he made his big ranch, acquiring 1401 across of deeded land and some 1600 across adapted to graving on the headwaters of the creek. His flocks increased, so that in one year alone be sheared 104,160 pounds of wool from 12,000 head of sheep, which he sold for Sees 850

Mr. Frazer received a shot through the ieg, which grazed the bone, and from which he nearly bled to death before he could receive atten-tion at Pilot Rock.

Helped Build Up Pendleton. Selling his 16,000 head of sheep in 1880, Mr. Frazer devoted his time and means to the erecting of fine buildings in Pendleton. In 1881, he put up a two-story building on Main street, 25x88 fest, now occupied by Cleaver Brothers' boot and shoe store, which was the first brick store in Pendleton, and probably the most expensive for its size, as the iron used in its construction had to be bauled up by team from Umatilla, the O. R. & N. railroad not having been built until the following year. He was vice president of the institution when was built the First National bank building in 1882, at the corner of Main and Court streets. In 1886, he built the Frazer opera house on Court street and Cottonwood, in which building he died. For the 15 years following his coming to Pendleton, he was active in business, one of the owners of the Custom flouring mills and of the Pendleton foundry and machine shops. Mr. Frazer disposed of the last of his sheep in 1891, selling them and the ranch to T. B. Wells and Mr. Jordan. Sickness came on and business reverses, so that since that time Mr. Frazer has lieved a quiet life. He carried some insurance on his life, but exactly how much is not positively known. He became a member of Eureka lodge, No. 32, I. O. O. F., about the time of the organization of that lodge in Pendleton in 1871, and has ever since been an honored member. For the past eleven months Eureka lodge has continuously had a nurse with the invalid, and has done everything possible to smooth the rugged pathway and make pleasant the declining years of a member who in his prime had done the same for others.
