LARCENY FROM A STORE

HENRY BRAUER HELD TO THE CIRCUIT COURT.

A System of Gambling Known as the "Strong Arm" Adopted in Pendleton on Saturday.

The preliminary examination of Henry Brauer held before Justice Fitz Gerald on the afternoon of Saturday, May 18, resulted in his being bound over to answer to the circuit court on the charge of larceny from a store. An attempt was made to hold him for the crime of robbery, but there were necessary elements lacking for such a crime; the other charge was substituted. Mr. Brauer is in jail awaiting trial, as he has been unable to secure $2500 bond, the sum fixed by the justice to insure his presence. The preliminary hearing was the second in a series of events that is certain to attract a great deal of attention from the legal and gambling classes and the general public.

The New System.

About 1 o'clock on the afternoon of Saturday, May 18, Henry Brauer walked into Peter Medernach's saloon, scattered up to a roulette table and introduced his new system of gambling by giving the game the strong arm for eighteen silver dollars of the usual size and weight. In other words, he made a grab at the money stacked upon the roulette table as a bank roll and secured $18. Going back a few hours the history of the case and giving the gist of the testimony given at the preliminary hearing; a strange state of affairs can be shown up. Brauer was somewhat intoxicated during the forenoon and had played off a few dollars against the roulette wheel. He had been skimming for a few hours a few dollars, failing in which he proceeded to carry a brilliant idea in to execution. He was talking with Clarence Penland, in front of the Penland lodging-house and informed him of what he was going to do. T. J. Wagner was back of the roulette wheel at the time and W. H. Gilmore, the proprietor of the game, was several feet away, walking the floor, but turned just in time to see Brauer make the touch. Mr. Gilmore told Brauer he had better put the money back. Brauer remarked that he would do nothing of the kind—that it was his money and he was going to keep it.

Mr. Brauer's Promise.

T. J. Wagner was the first witness for the prosecution. Brauer was awake at that time and conducting his own defense. He asked Wagner regarding the ownership of the money, and when he was informed that it was the property of the proprietor, he promised to give the information himself that no person owned gambling money. W. H. Gilmore was the next witness. After asking several questions Brauer got the information he desired, that roulette was a gambling game and that Mr. Gilmore was running the particular game. About this time, Mr. Brauer's nervous vivacity died out, and he wanted to go to sleep right in the midst of things. He asked for a lawyer to help him out, and R. J. Slater was secured. After questioning the witness, Slater then gave the information that Brauer had just played two dollars in silver against the game, which he had lost. Brauer called in his own behalf and swore that he had lost between forty and fifty dollars in silver against the game and that part of the money he had taken; was some of what he had lost. It was stacked 27 silver dollars in each pile, and some of his money had been placed in the pile from which he had afterwards taken the 18 cases. The charge was reduced to larceny from a store and the justice fixed his bail at $2500.

The Gambler's Alternative.

The affair has been thoroughly discussed. Of course, it will not be for the "strong arm" system to become popular. If any person can go into a store and take what money he wants from the laro or roulette counter, it will have a tendency to close the games, if there are any running in Pendleton; that is, if a person can get away with it without being punished.
