THE MAGNET CASH STORE

Clements & Wilson, Court and Cottonwood

MONDAY, JUNE 3, 1901.

DEPEW, RYAN, LINCOLN.

Chanaceer M. Depew, erstwhile railroad president, now United States senator, always a magnetic orator, gave the address at the dedication of the Hall of Fame in New York last week. He preached a sermon on the degeneracy of the times and actually enumerated the names and actual careers of the more and simple Bryan doctrine that Abraham Lincoln's face were well founded when he predicted disaster if ever the dollar were made of more importance than the man. He said:

"The dollar, in its eager pursuit, weighs down the wings of genius and prevents its flight to the lofty heights where congregate the Homers and Shakespeares, the Miltons and Berrons, the Michael Angelos and Raphaels and their peers. Our time has not produced their equals."
"We have no Shakespeares nor Longfells nor Hawthornes nor Emersons. Perhaps it is because our Michael Angelos are planning tunnels under rivers and vast mountains for the connection of west mountains of railroads and our Raphaels are devising some novel method for utilization of electrical power, our Shakespeares are forming gigantic combinations of corporate bodies; our Longfells are giving rein to fancies and imagination in wild speculations in stocks and bonds; our Hawthornes and Emersons have abandoned common sense and reveries of solit and soul which left their readers to the vision of a higher life and joy of the inspiration to exploit mines and factories."

"When this period of evolution is over and the nations and communities have become adjusted to normal conditions, the fever and passion of the race for quick wealth and enormous titles will be over. When the grove, academy and study will again become tenanted with philosophers, poets, historians and interpreters of God in man."

The distinguished New Yorker is quoted here at such length to his utterances may gain you small extent of publicity the East Oregonian can give. It is real good Bryan philosophy. It was the burden of the Nebraska's speeches through two national campaigns. It is food for thought. The political organization to which Mr. Depew belongs, arrogating to itself possession of the brains and culture of the country, nevertheless has been chiefly the instrument whereby the dollar gained the supremacy in the United States, which Mr. Depew so fully deplored in his New York speech. Senator Depew was proclaiming as an accomplished fact what Mr. Lincoln warned the country against, and Mr. Bryan held out as a paramount danger to the republic.

THE COMMUNITY OF INTEREST.

The community of interest idea has not dawned. It comes forward again, now that the Northern-Union Pacific quarrel has been settled. The plan is to amalgamate the railroad concerns of the country under one general head, while maintaining, for the present, the autonomy of each road. This is in effect exactly what was done with the steel concerns when was formed the United States Steel Corporation, commonly known as the steel trust. Four great systems are to be constructed upon a principle of the amalgamation of competition. The country will be divided into as many districts, and each system will avoid building into or seeking traffic in the territory of any other system.

What a momentous event, when such an arrangement is effected! Elimination of competition. Competition, the basic principle of our social and industrial structure! How little our people realize how radical are such changes!

Apply it to merchandising, and merchant no longer competes against merchant. Apply it to any department of human industrial or commercial activity, and the consumer no longer is sought by the seller, but must himself seek the trader and accept any terms offered.

Carry the argument further. Apply it to the farmer. Suppose producers of breads make coalition of their products. Could not they raise the price of food at will? And would not they do so?

And will not the railroad trust do the same for the same reason?

It looks a good deal as though this community of interests were not to the interest of the community.

The Portland Oregonian has started newspaper comment in Oregon on the next campaign by publishing the prospective candidates for United States senator and governor: For senator, Joseph Simon, Charles Fulton, Solomon Hirsch; for governor, T. T. Geom, Phil Metsham, Owen Summers, Wu.

M. C. Oake, Governor McSweeney of South Carolina, ought to come up here and preach the doctrine he enunciated when he refused to accept the resignation of Tillman and McLauren, and said: "The state is sick of politics."

Kansas comes forward with a new claim of supremacy, that there are born and bred the greatest girls in the world. It is apparent that the editor of the Wichita Eagle, the newspaper that puts forward the claim, has never been in Oregon. The Eagle man should travel more extensively before classifying the beauty of the nation. Any Oregon man knows that Kansas writer was never in the Webfoot state.

WHY THEY "ROOT."

If you should ask the baseball "rooter" why he pays his money to sit in the grandstand, he would reply, because of his great liking for baseball. He would be honest in that statement, yet he would be wrong. If he had an intense liking for the game, he would play it. Men fond of fishing do not pay their money to watch other fellows fish; and hunters pay no admission to watch other hunters at the traps.
Why, then, is it that nine-tenths or more of the people who make up the crowds at the ball games never play themselves at the game, but follow the sport with a lively interest?
Because they like to "root." It is the unreasonability of the grandstand that makes it so attractive. There all rest and sit at ease, and for two hours men and women rest as they cannot rest elsewhere.

Everything goes on the grandstand and on the "bleachers." Men of dignified and even of aristocratic social position, in the usual sense of the word, sit, smoke, eat, drink, talk, and speak in a loud and noisy manner, and are free to do so. Old boys are privileged to become like young boys, and they like it. If they cannot behave on the street as they please, they would be glad to do so in the grandstand. Their friends would arrest them.
By the same influences our American people are drawn to the mountains, the lakes and the seashore. Their daily life is too artificial. Month after month they walk about in conventional straight jackets, and they go to the seashore to relax and wear easy garments, walk echos in the hills, and escape the strain of social restrictions.

NAVAL NEEDS OF THE PACIFIC.

The return of Congressman Foss, chairman of the house committee on naval affairs, from an inspection of government naval stations on the Pacific coast calls our attention to two important questions regarding the future development of the naval branch of the national defense: (1) The benefit that will accrue to the nation from having a man at the head of naval affairs who is devoting the best years of a very promising public career to a study of the needs of the Pacific coast; (2) the future of the Pacific coast as a naval base of operations.

The words "Pacific coast" apply to the Pacific coast, followed by the general term "Pacific coast" at Oahu at San Francisco, and the word "Pacific" is applied to the Pacific coast of the United States, which give us a line of coast 5,000 miles long. All tend to attract public attention on western coast of the Pacific as the most important of the world.

But our congressmen and the "open door" men stand for the navy. With the growing possibility of commerce with the Orient, the naval stations on the Pacific coast, such as Mare Island and at Bremerton, will assume greater importance and will demand larger attention from congress. Indeed, the government already has at Bremerton what Congressmen Foss regards as the finest dry dock in this country.

The possible market in the Orient for the surplus staple of our western country is not the only reason, however, for congressional liberality in making appropriation for the dry dock and naval station on the Pacific coast. Our trade with our own north-west territory of Alaska is assuming proportions which will alone justify the maintenance of one or more great
