THE OPPORTUNITY IS HERE.

The East Oregonian has for some months contended that Eastern Oregon republicans should share in the nominations of their party for state offices. In short, it has stated that an Eastern Oregon man should be nominated for governor and one or more of the other nominations should go to Eastern Oregon men. This action on the part of this paper has met with universal approval from all sides and the Eastern Oregon press, almost to a unit, have joined in the work.

The East Oregonian has named no candidates, for it has none to name, but the man to be selected for the highest office should be an organizer and an executive. No other can win the nomination. He should have a reputation for political work. He should be a man possessed of many qualities, both as a politician and a business man. He must be fully equipped to be successful, as it would require all the strength of such a man to merit the nomination and win at the polls. If those who have charge of the destinies of the republican party east of the mountains will agree upon the men to be chosen and go to the state convention determined to nominate them, their work will be fruitful and Eastern Oregon will have a voice in state affairs in which she has been in need for many moons.

The work pointed out for these republicans to perform is a work important to the people of Eastern Oregon, populists and democrats, as well as republicans. It is a work that has been long undone to the great injury of the Inland Empire and if left undone much longer will result in state division and the breaking up of what is now Oregon.

THE RELIGIOUS SENTIMENT.

There is no sentiment which roots so deeply in the hearts of men as a religious sentiment. It rules every other passion of life. It gives nerve to every deadened hope. It puts a magnetic spark in every aim and thought.

For years the Jews have had in mind the actual rebuilding of the city of old Jerusalem. In the sure faith that their Messiah is still to come and reign there, they have taught that the ultimate return to that city was the ground work and basis of Jewish faith. In pursuance of this faith, Jewish Jews have actually begun the preliminaries of rebuilding the temple and the city. They have secured titles to land near the present site of Jerusalem, where they intend to begin a settlement for all the pilgrims who will go back to the land of the patriarchs. It is almost incredible to believe that olden city will be resurrected and inhabited by the descendants of this dispersed race, battered down by infidels and scorners, trampled upon by infidels and scorners, pillaged by vandals and ground beneath the heel of barbarians, it has become a by word for unbelievers and a resting place for tourists. But history is full of surprises. Prophecy, if it has any potency, says many strange things. In the past, history has been repeated, why not in the future.

This reappearing of that tragic solemn ground would be one of the most beautiful pages of history. The gathering together of that scattered, wandering race, into the folds of its father's land, would send a thrill of wonder and amazement throughout the world. The

In preference to putting another load on the sinful shoulders of the river and harbor bill. The progress of aridity will be arrested by leasing the stock ranges, and turning it to the interest of the leaseholders to renew their forage, thereby restoring the vegetable protection to the moisture in the soil. The deep springs that have been dried up by destruction of the ranges will again become affluent and the run off of streams will recover its regularity. So this policy will not only get money for irrigation works, but will also conserve the water to fill them.—San Francisco Call.

NOTE AND COMMENT.

One of the saddest pictures I ever saw was that of a shipwreck. The bulk of the vessel was stripped of every mast and spar. It lay upon its side, among the rocks on a desolate coast. The waves were lapping its broken prow. The sea birds were hovering over it. It lay helpless and alone on a barren coast. For miles and miles no human habitation was in sight. The sun was setting and the west was flushed with golden light. Around the scene there hovered such an awe, desolation, that I could have sworn, had I been a giant ship. Full rigged and proud she had braved the seas for years. So responsive to the pilot's touch, that she might have been a thing of life. So eager in the lurching wind, that her captain's beam would gleam with pride, as he saw the land recede from view. So gay with life and joy. So laden with hope, so fair to see. And then to be tossed at last, without warning, without mercy, to lie a ghost on a rock-bound shore. It was around this desolate craft, woven into a story of human life. It filled my eyes with tears. There was such a simple and striking likeness between her fate and the fate of men I knew, that she seemed to be a human and my heart gave her its full, overflowing measure of sympathy.

Two boys start out in life with equal talent and equal opportunity. They improve every moment in industry and education. They fit themselves for the calling of their choice. They apply their energies equally well to every task they undertake. They have the same social, moral and religious surroundings. They have a parentage of equal honor and standing in the state. They have the same social, moral and religious surroundings. They are given every opportunity for advancement. The same broad highway to wealth and success lies before each of them. Fifty years after, one is as well respected, well fixed, honorable citizen of the state. The other is a convict, or a pauper. Why is it so? This is the human experience everywhere. But why is it so?

The coming Lewis & Clark Centennial exhibition will have a tendency to awake the study of Western history. It is a time some of the history of the Pacific coast was taught in the schools of the coast. A scant outline of a few leading events in the early settlement of Oregon is all that is now found in text books. The warp and woof of history lies yet in pencil of the historian. The beauty of her legends and her pioneers will fill an interesting volume. It is a tale that grows fresher with each telling. Those who lived its early scenes are fast passing out of the world's great frontier. Ere they all go, let us hear from their lips the secret of that golden past—that we may leave its tradition to those who follow us.

Journalism is the greatest of the living arts. Its gigantic task of informing the world of the world's doing, of moulding public opinion, making and unmaking the statesman, judge, general and king, is far above that of any other art. It is kept touch with the heart of the present's cot, it is the council chamber of the nations.

Scrofula

Scrofula is an unwelcome legacy, but one which the children of blood poisoned parentage must accept, with all its humiliating consequences. It is an inheritance that makes one poorer; that brings wretchedness and disease instead of health and riches, for the child whose ancestral blood is tainted with Scrofula or the loathsome virus of Contagious Blood Poison is unfitted for the arduous duties of life so long as any of the transmitted poison remains in its veins. Scrofula manifests itself in various forms; swollen glands about the neck and throat, catarrh of the head, weak eyes, hip bone disease, white swelling and offensive sores and abscesses are familiar symptoms, attended usually with loss of strength, poor digestion and pale or bloodless complexion. The skin is sometimes most dreadfully affected, eruptions breaking out on all parts of the body. Scrofula destroys bone, tissue and flesh; no part of the human system escapes its withering, benumbing touch.

Parents whose blood is poisoned by their own misdeeds, or whose children themselves may be suffering for the sins of some remote ancestor, must restore their own blood to its normal purity and strength, or they cannot expect healthy, robust children.

Dr. S. S. Scrofula, like other diseases of a deep-seated, constitutional character, by restoring life and purity to the profoundly poisoned blood, and the rich, strong blood that is carried to the swollen and diseased glands absorbs, and destroys the tuberculous deposits, and the painful, disfiguring sores and other evidences of Scrofula disappear.

S. S. S. should be begun immediately upon the appearance of the first symptoms, or where there is a known predisposition to Scrofula. Our medical department will be found of great help to those who are struggling with this wasting disease of heredity or any other blood trouble, and we invite you to write us. Should you or any member of your family need advice, our physicians will cheerfully give the information you desire, for which we make no charge. Book on Blood and Skin Diseases free.

Start Girls Right!

Many beautiful girls become invalids for life, because at the crucial period of puberty they pay no attention to the laws of health. Mothers should protect their daughters' health by giving them their necessary information and proper treatment. When the menses come on a girl unawares in her inexperience she is either frightened into ineffectiveness, or scared into trying to check the flow. Many girls have checked the flow and it has never started again. And as a result they have grown pale-faced, with "crow-tracks" on their cheeks, and dark hal-moons under their eyes. A dose of taken every morning after a girl is twelve years old will bring the menses on properly and keep them regular. It will help her to develop into attractive womanhood and equip her for the duties of wife and motherhood. All druggists sell $1.00 bottles of Wine of Cardui.

The Hollywood, Asbury Park, N. J., February 3, 1900.

I read your advertisement in regard to Wine of Cardui in the Baltimore American, and it so favorably impressed me that my first visit to the store during the holidays I purchased a bottle of it for my adopted daughter, who is suffering with female troubles. She had been under the doctor's treatment for some time, and when her periods would come on her suffering was something terrible. I induced her to try it and the first dose brought on the menses. She looks regularly so to the directions, and was greatly relieved. To use her own words, "It saved my life." J. W. WEAVER, CHESHAM.
