how others is but an excrement upon the body social. A boil, also an excrement, is one of the most earnest and sincere things in the world. It is not much, therefore, to attribute sincerely to Mrs. Nation. The majority of the inmates of an asylum for the insane are the very personification of sincerity. GLEANED FROM PAGES OF CURRENT PUBLICATIONS.

Some time during the agitation for the revision of the Westminster Confession a member of many years standing in the Presbyterian church was heard to remark: "Why all this agitation for the revision of the Creed? Here I have been a Presbyterian for over forty years and never subscribed to any Westminster Confession nor even knew there was one."

The Kansas City Journal is responsible for the following story: Frank Anderson was for many years a commercial traveller who made Galena. He was passionately fond of honey, and the proprietor of the Galena hotel at which he always stopped always had some on hand for him. On one trip, Anderson took his wife along, and as he approached Galena, he mentioned to her that he was getting to a place where he could have honey. When the pair were sitting at the supper table that night, no honey appeared, and Anderson said sharply to the head waiter: "Where is my honey?" The waiter smiled and said: "You mean the little black haired one? Oh! she don't work here now."

At a banquet given some time ago to Sir John Tenniel, for many years cartoonist on Punch, Mr. Choate, the American ambassador in London, was addressing the banquet. "Literature and Art," said, among other things: "The beauty of these illustrations (Tenniel's cartoons) is that everybody can find his own picture in it. I was looking at 'Alice Through the Looking Glass' this afternoon and found my own portrait painted by Tenniel."

William M. Everts was once standing with some companions on the banks of the Potomac, where the river is a mile wide, and a somewhat leaguer distance was showing across the water. One of the group said: "Right here, said, George Washington, said, he took a silver dollar and frung it right across the Potomac, said." Everts, not to be outdone, quickly exclaimed: "Why, that's nothing to what Washington could do when he tried. On the 4th of July he once threw a sovereign across the Atlantic, perhaps one of the most concise descriptions of the American revolution ever given."

Vance Thompson in the Saturday Evening Post tells the following story of the painter Vermet and the first Baron Rothschild: "We were standing in the north wing of the palace of Versailles staring at that largest of Versailles' pictures, 'The Taking of the Sualah of Abdul El Kadar.' The Baron Rothschild wanted his portrait painted by Horace Vermet. What will you charge for a full length portrait, he asked. Thirty thousand francs, Vermet replied. It's a monstrous price, said the Baron, I'll give you three thousand. We won't bargain said the painter. I'll paint it for nothing—the honor of painting it is my payment, Vermet kept his word and when his famous battle picture appeared, there, sure enough, was Baron Rothschild in the every foreground. Dressed in a greasy garb with his arms filled with moneybags, he was running away. What had the dozen or more great barons, his sons and descendants, pay now to blot out that immortality? A prettier sum than the vengeful painter asked, I warrant."

us democrats almost into apoplexy." In a recent number of "The Pilgrim," the editor of that journal devotes a little space to a poet of which others have rendered somewhat. Where is the old friend of childhood, "The Poet's Corner," without which no "family newspaper" then thought itself complete? The average modern editor thinks he has done his whole duty by poetry when he gives up a column to joint selections in the Sunday edition. The pilgrim cannot drop the subject without a mention of those unknown poets whose casual, and often unnamed outgivings at times have the touch of true inspiration. Among these is a little poem which history has happened to learn, though he does not know the name of either subject or author. A Washington correspondent, a young man who was a favorite with all who met him, was stricken with a cold, and a fatal case of pneumonia developed. A fellow craftsman paid anonymous tribute to him on these lines, so free from cant, yet so simply sincere:

"Out on the sea, whose other shore Lies in the land of evermore—
His barque has sailed.
"The skies are blue, the waves are still,
No hoding clouds portending ill—
His barque has sailed.
"Rest to the tired head and hands,
Peace in the unknown untried lands—
His barque has sailed.
"After him, over the purple sea,
Those loved and left gaze wistfully—
His barque has sailed.
"They would not call him back, but yet
Their eyes with bitter tears are wet—
His barque has sailed."

MAGAZINES FOR AUGUST.

The features of the August number of Everybody's magazine is Emilio Aguinaldo's story of his capture by Funston. The Filipino leader narrates the circumstances which led to his taking, in a manner of great clearness and simplicity. It is a most interesting as well as an important contribution to the history of one of the bravest deeds of warfare. Oscar K. Davis, the Sun's war correspondent, follows with a sketch of Aguinaldo from ratification of an unusual point of view. There are several delightful nature articles. L. W. Brownell tells of the "Birth of a Butterfly," which is finely illustrated; I. W. Blake writes and A. R. Dugmore pictures "Day with a Mocking Bird." Maximilian Foster contributes "Tragedy"—a fine moose story. "Photography as a Fine Art," C. H. Callin writes of the work of C. H. White. A rarely interesting contribution is "Pictures that Show Motion," being the evolution of the cinematograph, by Roy McCardie. J. M. Bacon tells of "Steering Balloons by Upper Air Currents."

Scrivener's magazine for August is the annual fiction number, and it contains seven complete short stories, the beginning of a new serial, and special illustrated articles on poems. The color printing is shown at its best in the exquisite work of Maxfield Parrish, who has found a very congenial subject in Quiller-Couch's story of the Cornish coast, which has to do with a classical legend. These drawings are the most remarkable in color which have been yet attempted. There is also a beautiful cover-design by Albert Herter, which it has taken ten printings to reproduce.

Three of the five exquisite photographs that won prizes in the "rural" contest are included in the Ladies' Home Journal are beautifully reproduced in the August issue of that magazine. One shows a cluster of slender, graceful birches on a high bank above a glassy lake, with hills in the background; another, of a "spring-time" scene of flowers in bloom, with a lily pond winding through; and the third, a large flock of sheep, on a sultry July afternoon, disappearing with their shepherd into the thick cloud of dust raised by their passage.
