found scattered over the countryside, though to the credit of the British Isles he said no snakes were observed.

At Joyeuse, in France, when a record-breaking rain of 31 inches fell within 24 hours, small fish were found in multitudes on the hillsides.

At Seawate, in Borrowdale, England, on November 27, 1846, small fish of many varieties fell with a terrific downpour of rain that lasted for over a day.

In the hills above Bombay, India, lizards, snakes, frogs, scorpions and many varieties of reptiles and insects have been reported as falling from time to time in furious rainstorms.

Moreover, the Bible records a rain of lizards, snakes, frogs and other living creatures during the troubles between Pharaoh and the children of Israel in Egypt.

But even more remarkable freaks of rain are noted in weather journals. Numerous authentic incidents of red rain, believed at the time to have been showers of blood, have been reported.

In France and Germany, in 1181, at Genoa in 1744, at Naples in 1813, and near Rome in 1870, occurred some of the most noted instances. Yellow rains have been several times observed in the United States, the most noticeable storm of the kind being at Lynchburg, Va., in March, 1879.

Snow fell from a clear sky to a depth of nearly an inch at Bloomington, Ill., on March 15, 1885, and deep deposits of red snow have been found in Greenland. Tornadoes have been known in many instances to suck up the contents of wells, tanks and even large ponds, carrying them miles before releasing them.

In the case of Minneapolis, it seems reasonable to believe that a small "twister" accompanied the storm of Tuesday evening, in passing over the marshes at the edge of the city may have picked up a number of frogs and toads as it passed, dropping them afterward within the city limits.

Stranger things than this are often seen in hot weather by men who recoil with horror from recording the discovery of a sea serpent. It therefore is becoming to the great American public to think a second time before condemning all men in Minneapolis as liars.—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

SHALL GIRLS GO TO COLLEGE?

An amazing amount of educational sense and wise, gracious counsel are crowded into an article in the current number of the Independent on college education for girls by Helen Edna Hersey, a graduate of Vassar and formerly a teacher in Smith college.

The writer disposes at once of the question as to whether a girl should go to college or not by declaring that "there is no doubt that it is becoming an obstacle to women who must enter the wage-earning world not to have what is called a liberal education."

With her there is no room for controversy upon this point. The profession of teaching is slowly being closed to all those who have not the requisite college degree, and Miss Hersey believes that other professions will follow suit.

Among the gains of the college life Miss Hersey places first "the trained mind." She demolishes the old-time notion that college education means merely an accumulation of knowledge.
