Sunday morning at about 8 o'clock, Timm Pahl, a carpenter, was found dead at the levee about one-fourth mile south of Main street.

C. S. Collier was driving to his place across the river when he came upon a man lying almost prone upon the ground in the bushes and seemingly drunk. He made a closer examination, and found that the man was dead, and that a rope around his neck at-tached to a tree held his head nearly a foot above the ground.

It was a shocking sight and Mr. Collier hastened back to town to obtain assistance. Deputy Sheriff Joe Blakley was called up and with the aid of few others the dead man was taken to Jesse Failing's undertaking rooms. There a post-mortem was held by Dr. W. G. Cole, coroner, showing that Pahl had met his death by strangulation. Mrs. Pahl was sent for and appeared at the undertaking parlors in a heart broken condition. She waited patienty until the examination was over and the coroner's jury had been summoned. Between sobs she answered the ques-
