THE BEAUTIFUL SAN JOSE

E. S. Kearney Writes From the Garden City of California.

F. H. Kearney, who recently returned from Pendleton to San Jose, Calif., writes an interesting letter describing that locality to J. M. Pennington.

San Jose, Calif., Sept. 11.—I have called all the principal cities of the state, have seen the several fine parks and numerous places of amusement, and of all the pretty places I have ever seen, I must confess, San Jose is far superior to them all. This charming city has a population of 35,000 on the surrounding country neat and picturesque, walked in on three sides by the rising mountains whose craggy peaks pierce the azure sky, and situated in the Santa Clara valley, which is about 18 miles wide and 30 miles long and level as a floor; the roads are highly elevated, sprinkled 3 to 4 times a day, and, to add to their beauty, excellent shade trees are waving as stately as far as the eye can see.

Electric roads connect the several valleys and the fare is down to you one cent a mile. What a heavenly ride is for bicycles! Every one who has ridden on these roads, they are in profusion everywhere. And now, besides these, there will come coming past you the electric automobile, which there are about 40 in constant use, and on such good roads will service you perfectly.

The water is very good. It costs only about $50 to procure a good flow of excellent artesian water.

On going through San Jose or traveling through the surrounding country, it seems like taking a trip through a floral garden. Floral ornaments of every kind and description are laid bare; also the trees, shrubs and vines indigenous to the three zones occur side by side.

San Jose is very appropriately called the "Garden City." In fact the whole valley is one natural garden of the vegetable, fruit and flower; a sort of a thousand different floral shows capture the eye the year around.

The buildings are modern, some on

IEWS OF PENDLETONIANS

CITIZENS SPEAK OF PHASES OF MCKINLEY'S CHARACTER.

His Career as Statesman, Lawyer, Debater, Soldier, Characterized.

The sole thought in the minds of all the people of Pendleton today was the funeral at Canton and the man in whose memory the nation turned aside from business and pleasure to join in testifying to his goodness and greatness. Some local opinions were secured as representative of various phases of his career:

McKinley as a statesman.
W. J. Farnish—No thoughtful man can avoid remembering Mr. McKinley as a man of peculiar power with the people. However one may believe regarding the many issues with which his name was connected, this can never be denied—the respect and confidence of the American people. He has never failed in the accomplishment of any great purpose. When he came before the country in advocacy of the system of tariff which he represented, he succeeded in inducing them to enact into law the doctrine to which he held.

When he asked the country to accept his policy of expansion, they accepted it, and endorsed him to the hilt. When he urged the passage of monetary measures, those measures were passed. One cannot doubt that he desired the will of the people to be done. He was not a leader who went far ahead to pave the way for reforms beyond the understanding of those contemporary with him, but he was a leader who went with his people to a desired end. Mr. McKinley was a man of the people. He himself was simple in life, and never got away from the sympathies of his home town. This was characteristic of his career as a statesman. And this is what will mark him in history as one of the great men of the age.

McKinley as a lawyer.
Col. J. H. Haley—Lawyers will accord to Major McKinley a place of honor among the men of the profession who attained high station in life. Major McKinley was one of the clearest men who ever went before a court and jury. He was one of the most conscientious practitioners who ever battled for the rights of the citizen. Among the many principles which he advocated, one that forms part of the foundation of his system of legal teachings—Adherence to the laws of morals as well as to man-made statutes. The ideal lawyer, according to Blackstone, must be a good man. Certainly, this was Major McKinley. While he perhaps did not rise to the heights of an exponent of law, he rose to great heights as the exponent of clean practice and honest intention. The members of the American bar are honored to count him among their number. They will all honor his memory, as they will honor the memory of his peers.

McKinley in Washington.
Col. William Parsons—For many years, I resided in the national capital, and observed the career of Mr. McKinley in congress. I have seen numbers of our prominent characters during the past thirty years, and have been more or less familiar with them personally. Mr. McKinley I knew quite well. He was a conscientious figure during the important periods of the national history from early civil war times to the present. And of his life in Washington, I can say from my own knowledge that he was in most respects an ideal American citizen. He was courteous in debate. He was persistent in arguing that for which he stood, and honest in his advocacy. His devotion to his wife during years of occupancy of responsible positions was such as to entitle him to a high place in the regard of the American home.

McKinley in War.
Col. E. D. Boyd, a soldier in the confederate army.—He was brave, conscientious, faithful in the discharge of duty and everything that is dear to the hearts of southern chivalry. In his devotion to the cause of the country he loved, he joined the union forces and was rewarded by promotion for conspicuous bravery on the field of battle. It was William McKinley who finally eradicated the bitter feeling which still rankled in the minds of the North and South after the war was over. Perhaps, since the time of George Washington, no other president has lived who was so much loved and esteemed by the people of the south, as this illustrious dead. If he is lost to them in person, still there lives the memory of the kindness, loyalty and uprightness that were characteristics of him.

McKinley's Religious Life.
Rev. W. E. Potwine—In giving an estimate of the personal religious life of the late President McKinley, I am let to remark, that a crisis in the life of a man reveals character. What a man does and says under such circumstances, gives the world a flash light picture, as it were, of his inner self. In the case of a good man, the moral and religious principles, that have slowly crystallized and become the basis of action, instantly comes into play. The virtues of unselfish consideration of others, of serene self-control, of Christian forbearance with, and temperate speech about persons, as well as of a noble character stand out to view. It was because of these basic principles, underlying the character of the late beloved president that, when sinking into the arms of his friends from the effects of the assassin's bullet, he gave the order for the protection of his murderer from maltreatment. Because of these principles, his next thought was for his bereaved wife, upon whom he knew the blow would fall most cruelly. Judged by these and other virtues that came into view in that crisis of his life, President McKinley's moral and religious life will be one that will be most thankfully remembered by a Christian people. Without ostentation, he was an earnest, God fearing man, whose faith and trust were not wanting when facing the fast approaching dissolution of soul and body. His reverence for holy things; his example of simple and sincere piety; his Christian bearing at all times are not among the least of things, that, in my judgment, go to make up the "heritage of his life" to this nation.

A SAN FRANCISCO PHYSICIAN.
Uses Herpicide Successfully in Treating Syphilis of the Beard.
He says: "I recently treated a case of syphilis (similar to barber's itch) of the lower lip, with Newbro's Herpicide. There was an extensive loss of beard, with inflammation extending to the chin. The result of the application of Herpicide was most gratifying. The loss of beard ceased and a new growth of hair is now taking place over the once inflamed area."
Melville E. O'Neill, M. D., "845 Howard St., San Francisco, Calif."

Herpicide kills the dandruff germ and causes the hair to grow abundantly.

Portland Wheat Review.
Portland, Sept. 19.—The Commercial Review says: The English and Continental demand appears to be largely checked, and although Pacific coast cargoes have been offered on rather lower terms, yet our exporters cannot or will not sell at figures corresponding with the level of prices there, and there are few buyers except for late shipment. All we can say is that the market is very dull and lifeless and prices are slaughtered to put stock in the market. We quoted $2.35 to $2.45 for standards; other grades whatever the miller will sell for.

Eastern Livestock.
Chicago, Sept. 19.—Cattle—Receipts, 18,000; market, 10c higher. Good to prime steers, $6 to $6.50; poor to medium, $4 to $5.80; stockers and feeders, $2.50 to $4.25; cows and heifers, $2 to $5; canners, $1.50 to $2.30; hogs, $3 to $4.75; calves, $5 to $9.70; Texas steers, $5.75 to $5.35.
Hogs—Receipts today, 28,000; tomorrow (estimated), 24,000; left over, 2870; market, active, 5c to 10c higher. Mixed and butchers, $6.30 to $6.90; good to choice heavy, $6.70 to $7.20; rough heavy, $6.30 to $6.70; light, $6.45 to $6.90; bulk of sales, $6.60 to $6.80.
Sheep—Receipts, 30,000; market, 10c to 15c lower. Good to choice wethers, $5.70 to $5.90; fair to choice mixed, $4.50 to $5.60; Western sheep, $3 to $3.50; Western lambs, $4 to $4.65.

Roston, Sept. 19.—The tone of the wool market here shows no weakness, notwithstanding the moving of wools has been quieter this week than for some time past. The conditions do not appear to disturb the equanimity of the dealers, who say that the quiet market is only to be expected after the free purchases of the past few months. The market expresses no speculative feeling, and while manufacturers are free buyers to cover orders, they are not inclined to pile up wool, because they think it is cheap. Territory wools continue to lead the list of sales, the call being largely for fine wools and for coarse grades.

Seven Years in Bed.
"Will wonder ever cease?" inquire the friends of Mrs. L. Pease of Lawrence, Kan. They knew she had been unable to leave her bed in seven years on account of kidney and liver trouble, nervous prostration and general debility; but "Three bottles of Electric Bitters enabled me to walk," she writes, "and in three months I felt like a new person." Women suffering from headache, backache, nervousness, sleeplessness, melancholy, fainting and dizzy spells will find it a priceless blessing. Try it. Satisfaction is guaranteed. Only 50c. HOUSE--PARSONS WEDDING

OCCURRED WEDNESDAY NIGHT AT THE EPISCOPAL CHURCH.

Marriage of Dr. William House and Miss Katherine Parsons.
On Wednesday evening, Sept. 18, at the Church of the Redeemer, occurred the wedding of Dr. William House of Heppner and Miss Katherine Parsons, daughter of Col. and Mrs. William Parsons of this town. Dr. and Mrs. House, after receiving greetings at the home of the bride's parents on east Court street, departed on the 10:30 train for Portland, to remain there until Saturday, go thence to Heppner, and return to Pendleton on about the first of October to make their home.

They will be at home in apartments in the Hotel Pendleton soon after October 1.

The wedding was witnessed by an assemblage that filled the church. Miss Raley was at the organ. While the guests were arriving, also rendered "Adoration," from Gail's "Holy City," and then, sharply at 8 o'clock, began the "Wedding March" from "Lohengrin," this being the signal for the entrance of the bride and her party. They proceeded up the center aisle, the ushers, Robert Bond and Elmer F. Dodd, leading, followed by the maid of honor, Miss Ethel Parsons, who preceded the bride, who was on the arm of her father. The groom and his best man, J. E. Lathrop, came from the vestry room at the left of the chancel, going behind the chancel rail, and meeting the bride at the chancel steps, whence upon his arm she was led to the altar by the groom. The Rev. W. E. Potwine awaited them there, and at once began the marriage ceremony of the Protestant Episcopal church, using the form for the ring betrothal. The bride was given away by her father.

Upon the pronouncement of the benediction the organ struck up the Fannhauer "Wedding March," as the recessional, the newly wedded couple leading, the best man and maid of honor following, and Col. and Mrs. Parsons and the ushers with them leaving the church for the house, where a few friends informally extended congratulations. During the reading of the ceremonial, Miss Raley rendered the "Angel's Serenade," by Braga.

The bride wore white corded silk made in train, a hertha of Brussels point lace, the veil fastened with strings of pearls and diamonds. She carried a cluster of bride's roses and a white prayer book in illuminated text, a gift from the rector. The maid of honor wore pink organdie and carried pink roses.
