THE MASTICATION CURE.

A German Scientist's Remedy for Indigestion on the Oldenstemon Principle.

Mastication is the latest cure for the ills which afflict mankind, says a writer in the Brooklyn Eagle. A German scientist has discovered that indigestion and all the complaints arising from it can be either prevented or cured by obliging patients to bite up thoroughly everything that enters their mouths. Even liquids, such as water, must be chewed to some extent, and soup must receive as much mastication as if it were composed of dry bread crumbs. According to the scientist who advocates this method, 80 per cent. of the stomach troubles of mankind are caused by improper methods of consuming food and drink.
The human mouth, he points out, is neither a mere receptacle for food, nor is it designed solely for tasting.
It is as much a digestive organ as the stomach itself. More than half of the process of digestion, he says, should take place in the mouth. It is when the work which should have been performed by the teeth is thrown upon the stomach that indigestion and other troubles ensue. Animals do not have indigestion, says the German discoverer, because those which have been given rough food never think of holding their food, as mankind does.
The dog licks its food and does not suffer from indigestion simply because nature has provided it with a digestive apparatus which renders chewing more or less superfluous. Nature, however, stopped with the animals.
No man yet investigated has been found to possess the dog's digestive ability.

Microbes in Jewels.

To the bacteriologist, as to the sapper, says the Lady's Pictorial, nothing is sacred. In his positive greed for a new scare he will ransack the secret recesses of my lady's wardrobe, attack Herr Baby's feeding bottle, ruthlessly destroy one's faith in sealed vessels.
Casting about to find some fresh lair of his beloved bacillus, he would now fling over the headgear of beauty herself a microbial shadow, so to say.
He would have us believe that the ubiquitous germ lingers in the material of which our dainty hats are composed, and, furthermore, that the very jeweled hatpins wherewith we secure them to our coiffures become coated with tiny organisms, which thus get conveyed to lips and throats.
It is surely a rather ridiculous suggestion, which the hat manufacturers treat with contempt. Really, if we were as microbe-ridden as all this, life would soon not be worth living.

Honey in the States.

The heroic equestrian statue of Robert E. Lee in Richmond, Va., is believed to have hundreds of pounds of honey concealed inside of it. For months bees have been going in and out of the parted lips of both the horse and the animal figure. The imsects were first seen there last summer, and doubtless have been making honey ever since. There is no way to get inside either figure without doing irreparable damage, but fear is entertaining that vandals hands may make the attempt.
