THE CHRISTMAS PURCHASES

ATTRACT NEW YORK FASHION WRITER MUCH AS THE GOODS.

Some Information for the Ladies by One Who Sees the Gotham Styles and Holiday Costumes.

New York, Dec. 11.—Although it is early in the month Christmas is in the air and the shops have all begun to put on their holiday dress. In spite of the alluring things that are displayed upon the counters, however, one's attention is divided between beauties purchasable and beauties purchasing, for the Christmas shopping woman of Gotham is certainly the most stunning creature imaginable.

Which one has gone the entire round and written chronicles of all the things fashionable there is always the tailor-made gown to fall back upon, with something new to say about it. The distinguishing feature of this particular mode at present is the little jacket which has been treated as a new variety of trimming, quite new and really charming. This consists of an amalgamation of the revers and the broad shoulder collar in a facinating fashion that is bound to become quite popular.

The effect of the trimming is somewhat that of the broad collar worn over the jacket, but at a glance one can see that the arrangement is not detachable and just below the collar there is such a decided incision to accentuate the revers effect that were this a separate collar there would be nothing to hold it in place. The slash is so deep in fact that a piece scarcely more than half an inch long forms the juncture between the collar and the lapel effect.

As the season grows older the postillion black grows in favor. On very tall graceful women this particular pattern is especially smart and it even looks well upon shorter women if worn by a faultless figure. A very pretty gown made in this fashion was of Pompeiian red ladies cloth stitched with tiny bands of black taffeta and trimmed with narrow strips of Russian sable.

Over this dress was worn a long cloak of the same color cloth, lined with Pompeiian red satin. There was a shallow circular yoke covered by two capes, below which the cloth was laid in box plaits, which flared somewhat below the hips and hung loose below the knees to the hem of the garment.

There were three box plaits each side of the opening, stitched with red silk. The sleeves had deep turned-back cuffs of black satin, edged with the fur that trimmed the dress.

A coat and a hat worn by a Christmas shopper were very smart. The coat was long, of fawn colored cloth, piped with the dullest of green satin. There was a deep color of the cloth also piped and a simulated second collar upon this, outlined by a narrow band of Baby lamb.

The hat had a soft crown of the cloth, something of a pudding-bag shape, and the rim was formed first of a double ruffle of black velvet on the top and another of black satin beneath that, and below, forming the under edge next the face, another ruffle of pale blue silk. There were pale blue and dull green plumes on the top of the hat at the front.

The popularity of the stitched trimming upon tailor made gowns is unprecedented. The designs for street wear are smartened principally by a band of taffeta and cloth of the same material as the dress stitched on in fanciful design, but for indoor use and more formal wear delicate ribbons, velvets, chenilles and bands of embroidery are used almost without limit. This fact is probably caused by the elaborate little vests which are worn with the jackets of tailor made gowns. Besides the lavishness with which the bodice or jacket proper is trimmed, the vests of fashionable winter gowns are so elaborate that they beggar description, and often times the cost of this little accessory covers nearly one half the cost of the gown.

Speaking of expensive trifles for up-to-date costumes, there is nothing more beautiful than the muffs and boas of ostrich feathers. Those in delicate colors for evening wear are particularly delicate and dainty. Among the designs in pale blue and pink are some having the part of the boa going around the neck made into quite a wide collar and of many short plumes put together with a charming effect, while the ends are long and round. In these particular boas there are three ends on each side. The muffs are large and plain of the ostrich tips.

"A WISE WOMAN" FRIDAY NIGHT.

Successful Comedy to be Presented by Competent Company.

Manager Welch announces that Wilfred Clarke's successful comedy, "A Wise Woman" presented by Ethel Balch and a well selected company of players, the leading man of which is Frederic Murphy, has been secured as the attraction at the Fraser opera house on Friday night.

This announcement will attract wide spread attention among our theatre goers, as much of a highly complimentary manner has been written and said about the attraction. The remarkable run of 238 nights that the comedy had on its initial presentation at the Strand theatre, London, is conclusive evidence of the popularity of the play with the public, and added to this the fact that the support embraces the best available talent is sufficient assurance that the engagement in this city, without question of doubt, will be the event of its kind during the present season.
