Portland Wheat—Commercial Review.

Portland, Dec. 12.—The Commercial Review says:

"The market during the past week has been quite active and has followed the advance of eastern and foreign markets. Prices have materially advanced, and club wheat sold as high as 62½c per bushel here f. o. b. Prices would have advanced higher if freights would not have absorbed a part of the recent advance in eastern and foreign markets. Farmers on the advance price do not seem to respond as freely as we thought they would. They have maintained all season that if they could obtain 50c at home they would let go their holdings; the same old story has been repeated. When they could secure the price they wanted and they could see that the market is a little active, they raised their pretentions and are not as liberal sellers that they claimed they would be when the markets reached their figures. It has been estimated that fully two-thirds of the crop of 1901 has been disposed of and exporters have all their houses filled to overflowing with wheat which they have recently bought. We quote Walla Walla club at 60 to 61c per bushel; bluestem, 62½c; valley, 62c, but very little demand for the latter, as millers are the only purchasers of the same, exporters paying no attention to valley wheat, as there is no profit in the same at these figures."

Wheat—The Oregonian.

Portland, Dec. 12.—The commercial editor of the Oregonian, says:

"The wheat market yesterday received one of those jolts which by some unwarranted law of trade seem to be due about the time the speculative public is falling over each other to buy. The eastern markets lost over a cent, and Europe, apparently, desiring to show its independence of American markets and American speculators, went off with a slam right after the opening. San Francisco failed to follow the east when it was advancing, but there was no hesitancy shown in following it on the decline yesterday. In the Portland market some of the buyers were holding aloof trying to get their bearings before taking a new tack. Some of them were offering 61 cents, and the country was reported to be showing more of a disposition to do business than was in evidence on the day previous, but was not yet prepared to accept 61 cents. The usual reports of higher bids were heard, and some heavy lots were sold at 62 cents, but this was above most of the limits. There was nothing doing in freights, but owners have not yet followed the decline in wheat."
