WAS THE MURDERER MAD?

DEBATED SANITY OF ASSASSIN CZOLGOSZ

Chicago Socio-Legal Forum Had the Proposition Under Consideration at Its Meeting.

Chicago, Dec. 17.—The proposition that Czolgosz, President McKinley's assassin, was insane when he committed the deed was vigorously upheld and as vigorously denied at a meeting of the Socio-Legal Forum at the Sherman House last night.

The paper giving rise to the discussion was read by Dr. Sanderson Christison, chairman of the executive committee of the association, and bore the perplexing title, "Epilepsy, Responsibility and the Czolgosz Case." The speaker's conclusions were that the assassin was a lunatic, that he was not an anarchist and that there was considerable reason to suppose that he was an epileptic. Combating the opinions of all the Buffalo medical men who examined Czolgosz with great care and patience, the ideas of the attorneys, both for the state and for the prisoner, and the investigations made by the United States secret officers, the police of many cities and the newspapers throughout the country, Dr. Christison emphasized his belief that the assassin had no connection whatever with anarchists, and that his act was the impulse of a madman. He added the startling statement: "As far as I know, the chief of police of Cleveland and myself are the only two persons who ever investigated the murderer's alleged connection with anarchists." He called Czolgosz "an aggravated specimen of the insane borderland and a degenerate of a psychotic temperament."

THE MAGNATE FIXED HIM UP

J. P. MORGAN PUT UP TRIFLE OF $1,500,000

To Help Out a Friend who was Embarrassed in His Street Deals in New York.

New York, Dec. 17.—Always a man of decision and prompt action, it took J. Pierpont Morgan only a few hours to get together $1,500,000 of ready cash when he knew it was needed by an old friend, who without it would be brought face to face with business ruin. Not only did Mr. Morgan prove that he was a friend indeed, but his course probably saved the financial world from serious disturbance. This concern is one which is interested largely in the promotion of industrial enterprises, and is known all over the world. The head of the firm has long been intimate with Mr. Morgan. In the money centers many rumors concerning this man were heard. It was said he had not realized on a large transaction as speedily as he had expected, and that he had been caught short of ready cash. With these rumors came an easy feeling in the market and a falling off of prices.

After trying to obtain large loans here and there, only to be unprosperous, the distracted man bethought himself of his friend, Mr. Morgan. To his office he went and explained the situation. It was then too late for Mr. Morgan to get the money, but he told his visitor to return on Monday morning.

With the opening of the market that day there was a further slump, and the report of the firm's difficulty was on every tongue. But at this time the head of the embarrassed firm was with Mr. Morgan. That able financier was actuated by a double motive. He wished to do all in his power to save his friend; he wanted to avert the disaster which might come to others in the wake of the firm's suspension. But so large was the sum needed that he himself could not place his hand on it in time to prevent the impending crash.

Then it was that he decided to call upon August Belmont. The three men were in consultation about fifteen minutes and then a sum of ready money—variously estimated at from $1,000,000 to $1,500,000—was turned over to the head of the embarrassed house.
