Eleven cents is now being offered at Salem for this year's crop of hops on contract. This is one to two cents higher than was offered last year. Dealers say that the 1901 crop left in America will not supply the American demand, and hence there will be no hold-over crop. This is supposed to account for the advance in contract price.

No matter how reticent Governor McBride may be on the subject of appointments, there is one feature of his administration upon which there should be no possible excuse for speculation. It is confidently believed that Governor McBride will be the uncompromising foe of professional corporationists and legislative lobbyists, says a correspondent.

NO M'KINLEY FUNDS.

Local Depository Has Received No Donations in Pendleton.

About a month ago the East Oregonian announced that blanks had been received at the First National Bank of Pendleton for those to sign who wished to give something to the McKinley National Memorial Association, for the erection and maintenance of a befitting monument at Canton, O., to the late martyred president. These blanks are to be filled out with the name and address of the donor and the amount given, and the name would then be sent to the association at Cleveland, O., where a record of it would be entered on the books and a beautiful certificate sent everyone who gives.

Up to the present time, not a cent has been given for this fund out of Pendleton, or, at least, not one has presented any donation to the bank.

AGAINST THE ALLOTMENT.

Of So Much Land for Fort Hall Indians.

Pocatello, Jan. 17.—The protest against the Indian allotment from Pocatello seems to have had but few signatures and was against the giving to the Indians the best selections of lands in the ceded portion of the reservation. The Fort Hall treaty provided that the Indians should be allotted such lands as they occupied in the ceded portion at its ratification. Major Caldwell, Indian agent, allotted them 320 acres for heads of families and 80 acres to each child, some families thus receiving 800 acres of their own selection of the lands ceded. This is protested, and it has also been asserted that allotments have been made to half-breeds

T. P. PAGE ON ARIZONA.

He Thinks the Country Does Not Compare With This.

A. M. Nye has received a letter from T. P. Page, who, with his family, left here during the fall to spend the winter in Phoenix, Arizona. Mr. Page says in part:

"This is a strange country. The valley in which Phoenix is situated is one of the prettiest valleys you ever laid eyes on—as level as a billiard table for miles and beautiful avenues of trees as far as the eye can reach, and where there is water to irrigate, everything can be raised—alfalfa, wheat, oats, barley, oranges, sweet potatoes, etc.—but water; that is the rub. If you can't get the water the land is worthless; as much so as the land along the Columbia river, and has much the same resemblance in many respects, only is quite level.

"I have not gone out into the country much yet, but am told that there are some very nice farms—alfalfa is the principal crop—where hundreds of cattle are wintered that come from the ranges of miles around.

"There are many fine public buildings, among them the capitol, Indian school, asylum, besides the ostrich farms and orange groves, but while you see all of these, you will see in between them the most desolate tracts of land on earth; land that is not worth 10 cents an acre unless water can be gotten on it, and I do not think this will be done for years, if ever.

"This is no country for anyone that enjoys good health and, really, I would not give a township in Umatilla county for this whole valley for my use. Pendleton and Umatilla county is better than anything down here."

Mr. Page thinks the following poem a good description of Arizona.

The Devil's Dream.

When the devil was ordered to prepare him a place,
 Which he could use for his own special race,
 He started to heaven on a trip to the moon,
 But when he got there he found it so cold that he left very soon,
 But when he got there, he found it no boon; so cold and so bare,
 No human to ensnare,
 So he flapped his wings and away he flew
 St. Peter to interview.
 Then he met St. Peter who to him did say:
 "If you want to raise hell go to Arizona."
 Then he rustled a bottle of booze,
 And set out for the banks of the Santa Cruz.

He was greatly delighted for when he got there
 He found thousands of acres of prickly pear,
 The bushes and trees had thorns,
 The flies had stingers and the toads had horns,
 And miles and miles of glistening sand,
 Seemed just the place to this demon band,
 But he felt his own reputation at stake,
 So he thought he would try some improvements to make
 Then he swore by his head, and also his horns
 That he would make a comparative vegetation of thorns,
 So that all who came to this country to dwell,
 Would surely think it was almost hell.

He covered the sand with prickly pear,
 And scattered the cactus everywhere,
 The Spanish dagger, sharp, pointed and tall,
 And last the cholla, to outstick them all,
 Gila monsters, centipedes and scorpions of a venomous breed,
 And then this chief from the Brimstone Lake,
 Imported the tarantula and rattlesnake,
 Campimochas, salamanders, vinnergerru and vinnergarroans,
 Montezuma ants, sand flies, with stingers an inch and a half long,
 The Apache Indians direct from hell,
 Was the next this devilish band to swell,
 And a million of skunks, with loud smell,
 To perfume his lad he loved so well.

The rivers of sand were almost dry.
 The water was seasoned with alkali,
 And as he stood on the slimy brink,
 He turned his nose from the terrible stink.

He fixed the heat at one hundred and forty-four,
 And banished the moisture for evermore.

Then he said as he heard his furnaces roar,
 He hoped it would reach five hundred more.

And gazed on the work he had done so well,
 As said: "I'm damned if this don't beat hell."

Then he flapped his wings and away he flew,
 And vanished forever in a blaze of blue.

And no doubt in some corner of hell
 He gloats over the work he done so well.

But now they call it sun-kissed land of the blessed;
 With its burning plains of burning sand;

With not enough water to run a wind mill
 From the Mexican line to the Bradshaw hill,
 Tarantulas and snakes, and flies and ants,

That crawl in your bed and creek in our pants,
 Sand storms, simoons, blizzards as well,

I'd like to know if this don't beat hell?

HAIR LIKE THIS
 is easily obtainable through the use of Newbro's Herpicide, the only preparation on the market that reaches and annihilates the germ or microbe that is responsible for all scalp diseases. It thus makes dandruff and falling hair impossible, and causes a thick luxuriant growth to replace the former thin, brittle hair. The gentlemen will also find it an inestimable boon to them, as it works like a charm on bald heads, bringing forth a growth of soft, thick hair that anyone might be proud of.
 Even druggists proclaim its virtues, as per the following:

and Indians who do not belong on this reservation. The Fort Bridger treaty, under which Secretary Hitchcock made the order for allotment, provides that each family may select 320 acres and each person over 18 may select 80 acres. This provision, however, is plainly abrogated by the Fort Hall treaty, which permits the allotment to the Indians of only such lands as they hold and were receiving at the ratification of the treaty. The Washington statement that 12 months will be required for the allotment is absurd. There is no snow, and the allotment can be made in 12 days.
