RICHARD CROKER, RETIRING, TURNED OVER TAMMANY TO L. P. NIXON, A YOUNGER MAN

The picture shows Richard Croker on the left and Lewis P. Nixon on the right. Nixon's popularity is due first to his business success. He is at the head of the great shipbuilding industry at Elizabethport, N. J., he has a large interest in the manufacture of smokeless powder at South Amboy, N. J., and he is president of the United States Long Distance Automobile Company. These are only three of his successful business ventures. The second cause of his popularity is his association with Grover Cleveland, Mark Hanna, Archbishop Ireland, Bishop Potter, Charles S. Bonaparte, John G. Milburn, Charles W. Moore, Charles M. Schwab, John J. McCook and Cornelius N. Bliss in the adjustment of labor troubles, and that he did much of the real work in averting recently the threatened great strike among the garment cutters of the United States. This is good company and good work to be found in. Add his record as the head of the Tammany vice committee of five and the total forms a reasonable basis of congratulation for all well-wishers of Tammany Hall.

What Nixon is he has made himself. His father was a citizen of Leesburg, Loudon county, Virginia, and though he was school teacher, magistrate and sheriff, the family were always in very moderate circumstances.

But, as he was an educated man himself, he sought to educate his son. He not only taught him all he could, but succeeded in getting him an appointment to the United States Naval Academy. How Lewis Nixon was graduated at the head of his class in 1882 at Annapolis; how he took a special course with honor at the Royal College, Greenwich, England; how he served in the United States navy, designed the Oregon and other war ships, and finally retired from public service to go into private business, have been told again and again. In and out of Tammany circles Nixon is accounted a handsome man. His one defective feature is his nose. It is short and retrousse, the very opposite of the long, broad and commanding nose of Richard Croker. But it indicates a pugnacity that is borne out in Nixon's daily life is backed by a firm jaw and a determined chin. Nixon's stature is commanding. He is six feet tall and splendidly proportioned. Physically there is not much lacking in the new leader of Tammany Hall.

Senator Foster favorably reported Senator Mitchell's Indian war veteran bill, which provides pensions for the survivors of the Cayuse and other Pacific Northwest wars.

DADS MEET TONIGHT.

Only Routine Business will Come up For Transaction.

The city dads will meet in the council chambers tonight for the first time since the 5th instant. They have not been meeting on account of the injunction against the mayor and four councilmen, who voted against Marshal Heathman and Recorder Beam, was filed. In the absence of the mayor, who is ill, Council Clopton will preside. No business except the regular monthly routine work is to come before the dads this evening.

Announcement.

To accommodate those who are partial to the use of atomizers in applying liquids into the nasal passages for catarrhal troubles, the proprietors prepare Cream Balm in liquid form, which will be known as Ely's Liquid Cream Balm. Price, including the spraying tube, is 75 cents. Druggists or by mail. The liquid form embodies the medicinal properties of the solid preparation. Cream Balm is quickly absorbed by the membrane and does not dry up the secretions but changes them to natural and healthy character. Ely Brothers, 56 Warren street, New York.
